Mussolini's New Job
Flight From Prohibition
Books on the Index
China Orders Airplanes

—By Arthur Brisbane—

AT GENOA bombs blew a hole 15 feet square in one of the royal palaces. Three other blasts attacked car barns and factories.

One hundred arrests were made immediately although the origins of the bombing is unknown.

The attack on a royal palace would indicate Communist activity. The bombing of factories, under Fascist control, might indicate revenge for recent attacks on churches and monasteries.

The dynamiter, as England learned through years of experience, is hard to handle.

It will be interesting to see how Mussolini will deal with him.

The Post-Gatty airplane started to go around the world in 10 days. If the plane had not been bogged, on landing, in mud of a Siberian village, the trip might have been made in eight days.

Flights across the ocean now attract comparatively little attention. Three such flights may start this week.

For the prosperous class the problem of prohibition and the uncertain quality of bootleg supplies will be solved by the flying machine. Canada or Bermuda will be only two or three hours distant and, before long, week-end trips to Europe will be popular. Then the government will worry about the amount of American money spent abroad, as Ireland used to worry about landlords spending their rents in England.

The White House denies, without allowing any definite quotation, rumors about relaxation of restrictions against beer. All hope abandoned, you that crave for beer, is the substance of it, unless you have a reliable bootlegger, with ale really made in Canada.

It was hardly to be believed that the administration would trifle with the prohibition situation before the 1932 campaign.

Meanwhile, the Wickersham commission goes out of existence, tomorrow, having spent much public money for nothing. It reminds you, in its farewell, of the disappointing firecrackers that only sizzle. A commission is useful to relieve the head man of responsibility, but rarely produces results.

The Catholic Church, through the congregation of the holy office, has placed on the index of prohibited books, four by the French philosopher Leroy, teacher at the College of France.

Leroy says it is impossible to demonstrate the existence of God or to prove any difference between the Creator and things created. He denies that God created the soul.

In the light of modern knowledge, what one man affirms or denies, is not important. Nobody ever saw electricity, although we see sparks and lightning flashes, and the burned bodies of criminals that electricity has killed. No one knows what it is.

It is impossible to prove the existence of many things that we know exist and condemnation of Prof. Leroy's books is interesting only because Leroy declares himself an ardent Catholic.

There was a time when the index of forbidden books was valuable to men of science, as a catalogue of new ideas, all new ideas, including the suggestion that the earth goes around the sun, being at one time forbidden. That is changed now, and unlike some of the more backward Protestant teachers, the Catholic Church now allows the teaching of evolution theories in its universities.

Children from Catholic schools are allowed to visit the Museum of Natural History, which contains magnificent demonstrations of the changes in animal life through evolution.

It is not long since a devout Protestant clergyman affirmed on Bible authority that every man has one rib fewer on one side than on the other, because one was taken out to make Eve.

Asked to examine a man's skeleton and see for himself that the number of ribs is the same on both sides, he replied: "I know that it is not so, and I should consider it blasphemous to investigate the matter."

Killings by brigands, "Reds" and government authorities, when they catch the brigands or "Reds," continue in China.

China's "Reds" alone are said by civic authorities of Changsha to have killed 400,000 within five years, and this is a comparatively small area.

Canton, opposed to domination by northern China, has been purchasing war materials with considerable intelligence. The purchases include 36 airplanes, 16 of them from America.

Thirty-six airplanes, with only 108 Chinese in them, can do more to worry northern Chinese

Girl Accuses Two Policemen of Accepting $60 Protection Money

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Charges that Boston policemen have been accepting vice protection money are under secret investigation by Deputy Supt. of Police James A. McDevitt, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The investigation resulted from the story told by a 19-year-old girl arrested in a vice raid, now being held incommunicado in the House of the Good Shepherd.

Her story may pave the way to an expose similar to the vice scandal which recently rocked New York and sent heads of magistrates, as well as corrupt policemen, toppling into the dust.

Another result was the discovery of evidence that Boston is a clearing house for the white slave traffic.

This was indicated by an indexed

ELEPHANTS FLEE CIRCUS FIRE

Worcester, June 29—Early arrivals at the circus on West Boylston st. fair grounds were treated to an unplanned event today when fire threatened to destroy the main tent of the show.

The blaze started in a wooden cattle shed and spread a heavy smoke from the hay stored within. Forty elephants were moved out of the fire zone.

A shift in the wind saved the big tent, but not before a similar shed was destroyed.

The circus fire department wet down the main tent. The dining tent was also moved by employes.

POST-GATTY PLANE HOPS FOR NOME

BULLETIN

Tokyo, June 29 (INS)—A monoplane believed to be that of Wiley Post and Harold F. Gatty, American round-the-world fliers, was sighted at 11:40 p. m., tonight (10:40 a. m., Eastern Standard Time) by the Japanese ship Jimbu Maru, in the mouth of the Kamchatka River.

Khabarovsk, Siberia, June 29 (AP)—On the last long hop of their aerial dash around the world, Wiley Post and Harold Gatty left here at 4 a. m. (Boston daylight saving time) hoping to reach Nome, Alaska, 2409 miles distant, without a stop.

More than six hours after the takeoff there was no sign of their returning. The weather was good.

Behind them lay about 9010 miles of land and sea, over which they had flown in 4 days 21 hours 34 minutes. Ahead of them was approximately 5750 miles, including the hazardous trip across the Straits of Tartary, the Sea of Okhotsk, the Kamchatka peninsula and Behring Sea, which stood between and Nome.

MAY MAKE IT IN 9 DAYS.

It was calculated today that if all goes well they should be in Nome at midnight tonight, Boston time.

Their longest hop up to the time they reached Khabarovsk was 2190 miles, from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Chester, Eng. After reaching Nome they will have a 1900-mile hop to Edmonton, Alberta, and a 2000-mile hop to New York.

If the last three hops are made non-stop, with only brief stops for sleep and refueling, the world fliers might reach their final destination Wednesday night, a few hours less than nine days after their start. Their aim was to make the world flight in 10 days.

Far ahead of their 10-day schedule when they encountered their first trouble at Blagoveshchensk, the stop immediately preceding the Khabarovsk landing, Post and Gatty had experienced two costly delays when they left here.

ON THEIR 7TH DAY

Their monoplane Winnie Mae stuck in a mud hole at Blagoveshchensk and it took 14½ hours to get it out and ready to start. They

A. C. BURRAGE DIES AT 71

Albert C. Burrage, horticultural expert, lawyer, and one time member of Boston's transit commission that built the first subway, died last night at his summer home in Manchester-by-the-Sea. He was 71 years old.

He was recovering from a year's illness and spent yesterday aboard his yacht, Aztec, in Manchester harbor, where he was seized with a heart attack and succumbed late last night.

He was an art connoisseur, a copper magnate, belonged to many clubs and a world famous producer of orchids.

Mr. Burrage was born in Ashburnham, Nov. 21, 1859. He graduated from Harvard in 1883 and was admitted to the bar the following year. He served as a Boston city councillor in 1892 and later was named to the Transit Commission.

He was married to Alice Hathaway Haskell of Boston in 1895, who survives. Two sons and a daughter also survive, Albert C. Burrage, Jr., Mrs. Harold L. Chalifoux and Russell Burrage. Funeral services will be held Wednesday from his residence, 314 Commonwealth ave., Back Bay.

First Session in Paris Ends Without Result; Washington Reflects Anxiety

DEBT SITUATION

THE SITUATION was described as most tense in Paris today after Secretary Mellon again conferred with Premier Laval without reaching an agreement on the Hoover war debt moratorium proposal. Another meeting was scheduled for this evening.

BERLIN—Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius received an invitation to an informal conference with Premier Mussolini.

WASHINGTON — State Department announces U. S. will accept no counter proposal to Hoover plan.

BULLETIN

Paris, June 29 (AP)—A communique issued at the close of the council of ministers at Elysee Palace this evening said merely that Premier Laval had informed the cabinet of the state of negotiations between himself and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The communique did not indicate what turn the discussion had taken.

Paris, June 29 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, conferred again today with Premier Laval on the issues raised by President Hoover's war debt moratorium proposal and, at the conclusion of the conference, the Premier announced he would meet with the Americans again this evening.

Before the evening meeting the French cabinet will hold a session at Elysee Palace. It was assumed that the cabinet was convoked to examine suggestions advanced by the American negotiators earlier in the day.

MEET DIFFICULTIES.

Difficulties which have not been settled were encountered in the conversation between Mr. Mellon and the French premier.

The negotiations, it was said, have reached a most delicate point. Before going any further Premier Laval decided it would be best to receive the advice of his entire cabinet.

All questions involved in the Hoover proposal—political as well as financial—were examined by the

DEBT DISCUSSIONS WITH FRENCH NEAR CRISIS ON FIRST DAY

U. S. EXPECTED TO MODIFY REQUEST

American secretary and the head of the French government.

At the conclusion of his conversation with Mr. Mellon, M. Laval personally dictated a communique to the press.

"Another conference was held today when M. Laval received Mr. Mellon, United States Ambassador Edge, Foreign Minister Briand, Finance Minister Flandin and Andre Francois Poncet, Budget Minister Pietri being kept to the Chamber of Deputies by his official duties," the communique said. "A new exchange of views took place. The next meeting will be held at 5:30 p. m. today."

The statement that today's session would be "very difficult" was made to the Associated Press this morning as Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon arrived at the ministry of the interior to continue his conferences with French officials.

He was accompanied by American Ambassador Walter E. Edge and aides from the embassy.

TIME ELEMENT IS PROBLEM

The American delegates said they had decided to maintain strict silence regarding the progress of the conversations, believing that by diplomatic courtesy any explanations should be left to their hosts. They reserved the right, however, to make statements in case French communiques should lack clearness or the American attitude towards any question.

It was understood the difficulties referred to by the spokesman include determination of the time at which Germany would reimburse France for the credit she advances as a result of not guarding the unconditional annuity of the Young plan, as well as the credits advanced to other countries.

Shortly after the opening of the meeting, the semi-official Havas News Agency issued a statement on the French viewpoint of the difficulties, which read as follows:

"It is believed that the American delegates, while accepting the French counter-proposals in their broad lines, will endeavor to secure acceptance of certain modifications in the French standpoint.

Through the kindness of the French government, Mr. Mellon will be kept informed of the daily position of the Italian liner on which Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson is cruising to Europe so that he can communicate with him by radio as he pleases. It is understood that President Hoover is in touch with Paris by cable as often as the situation requires.

GERMAN INVITATION

Conversation in the lobbies of the Chamber concentrated today on the puzzling features of the invitation extended to Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany to come to Paris for a friendly meeting with French statesmen. Premier Laval made it his invitation clear in a speech before the Chamber Saturday and followed this up with a statement confirming this talk with German Ambassador von Hoersch.

The Deputies considered this was a clear-cut offer and the American delegates got the impression that the Germans were to come at once, apparently next week, which occurred and the German preferred not to come until the Franco-American conversations are completed. A number of the deputies attributed the delay to German hesitation in giving the political guarantees for the future which M. Laval clearly indicated he wanted.

No effort was made on either side to hide the fact that negotiations over the war debt and reparations holiday had reached a tense point.

Inquiry as to what portion of the discussion proved the greatest obstacle brought replies that the entire question was involved and that it was difficult for any one portion of the negotiations to be singled out, as the cause of the greatest trouble.

EACH SIDE CAUTIOUS

It was explained after the morning meeting between Mr. Mellon and M. Laval that embarrassment on the part of both negotiators in a large measure was caused by the fact that each was conscious of the susceptibilities of the parliament behind him. Mr. Mellon, with Congress in mind, and the French Premier, who had to consider the Chamber of Deputies, found it hard to make concessions necessary to reach a rapid accord.

The seriousness of the lack of agreement between the American secretary and the Premier was shown, it was said, by the fact that M. Laval suddenly decided to call a meeting of the cabinet, presided over by President Doumer, and thrash out the whole matter before the entire government.

U. S.-French Agreement Held Up, Says Castle

Washington, June 29 (AP)—Acting Secretary Castle of the State Department announced today that the United States would accept no counter-proposal to President Hoover's debt moratorium plan which did not fall completely within the purpose of the Chief Executive's proposal.

"No agreement has yet been reached with France for the reason there are still some technical points to be settled," Castle said in his statement issued after he talked by transatlantic telephone with Secretary Mellon in Paris.

The United States has opposed the French suggestion that Germany on July 1, 1932, pay two years' unconditional annuities.

The French proposed that Germany pay the regular unconditional annuities, but that they be returned for Germany's use during the moratorium under credits being chargeable for the full sum for 1931 and another year's on July 1, 1932.

Such a burden, Secretary Mellon has contended, would be too great and would not fall within the spirit of the President's proposal.

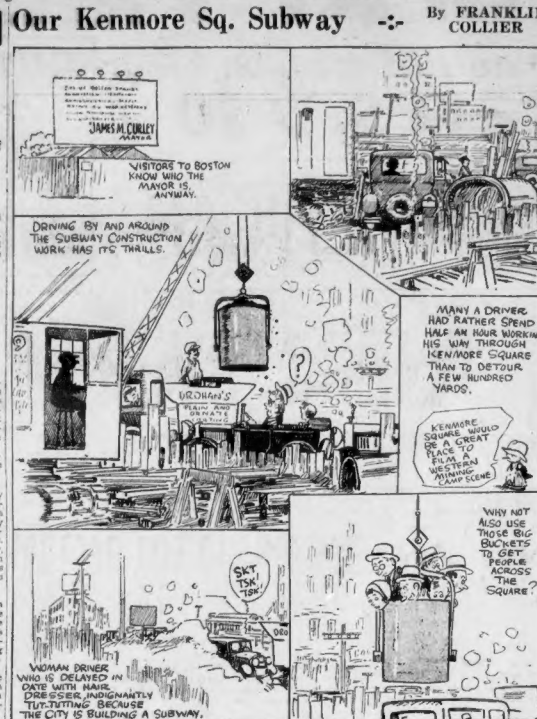

Mussolini Invites Germans to Conference

Berlin, June 29 (AP)—An invitation for Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius to come to Rome for an informal conference with Premier Mussolini was received at the foreign office this morning and forthwith accepted. The date remains to be fixed.

Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson already have signified their intention of repaying the German visit with a trip to Berlin on July 17. Premier Laval has extended a formal offer for a meeting in Paris as soon as the Franco-American war debt conversations are concluded.

The foreign office spokesman seemed surprised today that any official announcement of Germany's acceptance of the invitation to Paris was expected. It was said that "such acceptance is self evident in advance from Chancellor Bruening's radio appeal before the invitation was extended."

PLAYBOY HOPES FOR NEW TRIAL IN KILLING

Hathaway Is Confident That New Evidence Will Bring a New Trial and Freedom

Providence, June 29 — New evidence will be offered in an attempt to prove Elliott R. Hathaway not guilty of the slaying of Verna Russell, for which he has been convicted.

The evidence, the nature of which has not yet been revealed has so buoyed the convicted playboy that he confidently asserted his belief that this new evidence would be admitted by the Rhode Island courts and he would be proved innocent of the slaying of the pretty student nurse.

"I have the utmost confidence that the Rhode Island courts will admit the evidence that will show I am innocent."

This was the manner in which he summed up his feelings on the case in Cranston jail yesterday.

HATHAWAY UP AT 8.

The prison bell awoke Hathaway at 6 a. m. today and a half-hour later he was at breakfast in the prison dining hall. He had already greeted a number of acquaintances whom he had met in the days preceding his trial. Some of them shook his hand and offered words of encouragement.

The depression which seized him Saturday as he entered the prison gates was gone today and he was anxious to get back to his old job in the shirt factory. Prison officials, faced with overcrowded conditions, are trying to find a bench in the factory for Hathaway and he will probably begin work this afternoon.

BASIS OF APPEAL

The fact that new evidence has been uncovered will be included in the motions for new trial to be filed by his counsel not later than Wednesday. The appeal from the verdict and motions for new trial also will be on grounds that the first degree verdict was against the law and against the weight of evidence.

It was also learned that the motions for a new trial and the hearing of 340 odd exceptions probably will delay imposition of sentence until November.

Judge Charles A. Walsh, presiding judge at the trial, probably will hear the prosecution of these motions. Hearing on the motions may be delayed until the September sitting of the Superior court because Judge Walsh has planned to leave for a vacation on July 1st.

If Judge Walsh dismisses the motions, Hathaway's counsel will prosecute them before the Supreme court, which opens its session late in October.

"Western Front" Now Showing in Berlin

Berlin, June 29 (AP)—Erich Maria Remarque's motion picture "All Quiet on the Western Front," which last winter led to National-Socialist demonstrations with the release of smoke bombs and mice in the theaters, is now being exhibited to packed houses in two of Berlin's largest theaters.

WORLD FLIERS OUT TO TRIM RECORD BELOW SCHEDULE

Map shows the route being followed by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in the round-the-world flight which to date is a few hours ahead of the 10-day projected schedule. The Americans hopped off from Khabarovsk early today for Nome, Alaska. The route to Nome is one of the most perilous.

Malden's Biggest Policeman on Trial

Charges of drunkenness, neglect of duty and violation of the police rules and statutes against Patrolman John A. Campbell, the biggest patrolman on the Malden force, will be heard before Police Commissioner Artemas B. Sweezey tomorrow night.

A little more than a year ago Campbell was "on the carpet" for driving his auto down the railroad tracks and at that time was given many hours of punishment duty.

Gilda Gray Is Regaining Health

New York, June 29 (US)—Gilda Gray appears to have won a stern fight for life, doctors said today.

The dancer, stricken with a heart attack Saturday, has passed the crisis.

Although visitors were still denied admittance to her apartment at the Hotel Warwick, the physicians believed she might be out again in a few days. They had wanted to remove her to a hospital late Saturday but feared the move would bring death.

NEW HOPE SEEN IN ARMS PARLEY

London, June 29 (AP)—Reviewing the world disarmament movement before the House of Commons today, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald said he hoped that when the disarmament conference, opening next February, is adjourned "We shall have not merely pieties but scales, not merely principles but standards, something each nation can examine and that obligations undertaken by other nations are actually fulfilled."

The Prime Minister listed events of recent years which have had pacifying influences and remarked that the announcement of the impending meeting of the French and German ministers "makes one's heart glad."

"The initiative of President Hoover will have its effect and will show that the world today is not the abandoned place so many superficial cynics always are claiming it to be," he said.

The prime minister declared a comparison of arms expenditures showed Great Britain to be the only power that has reduced its naval and military outlay during recent years, while France, America, Japan and Italy have been increasing theirs.

The total United Kingdom expenditure for naval purposes in 1914 was 51,500,000 pounds which, in terms of present day currency, is equal to about 76,000,000 pounds.

In 1924-25 Great Britain's expenditures totalled 58,000,000 pounds and in 1930 the nation's outlay was 52,400,000 pounds. Mr. MacDonald pointed out that this represented a reduction of 23,700,000 pounds since 1914.

In 1914, he said, the United States spent about $150,000,000 or approximately $210,000,000 in the present currency. In 1924, Mr. MacDonald continued, the total was about $350,000,000 and in 1930, $390,000,000—an increase of $180,000,000 as compared with 1914, and $43,000,000 compared with 1924.

MARRIAGE RULE CHANGES EASY ON INNOCENTS

Episcopal Church Radicals to Amend Law Regarding Divorced Persons

New York, June 29 (INS)—A radical "amendment to the amendment" of the canons of the Episcopal Church in reference to divorce laws will be submitted to the general convention in Denver, September 16.

The joint commission on divorce of the convention would amend the new canon of divorce, going a step further than the proposed amendment made public April 27, which authorized priests to marry divorced persons under certain conditions, but forbade the use of the prayer book service or church for the performance of the ceremony. The new amendment authorizes the use at the service of the Book of Common Prayer.

The announcement said the change has been made to meet a storm of adverse criticism of the original suggestion, but there are indications of a fresh storm of protest over the adopted plan now proposed.

A battle on the floor of the convention was indicated when it was revealed that a minority of the commission has prepared a report, proposing that a marriage of divorced persons shall not "be performed by a minister of this church," but if the parties are married by civil authority, no impediment shall exist to their membership in the church, and a minister of the church may, at his discretion, bless the union."

WORLD FLIERS HOP FOR NOME

had spent 26½ hours there previously overhauling their plane, resting and waiting for advantageous weather.

Their takeoff here marked the beginning of their seventh day.

Weather reports along their route varied. The Kamchatka peninsula area was reported to be both clear and stormy. The Bering Sea was reported clear, but Japanese advices said a storm was forming in the Japan Sea and moving in a general direction toward their path.

Post and Gatty believed weather conditions were satisfactory, however, and left suddenly, expecting a non-stop flight to Nome as to after working the better part of a night and a day on their plane.

THANKFUL TO RUSSIANS

Both Russians and foreigners joined in giving them a cordial sendoff. A large crowd was at the landing field when the Winnie Mae shot into the air, circled twice and shot eastward in the approaching darkness.

Before leaving both Post and Gatty expressed their appreciation for the help the Russian Aviation Society had given them here and elsewhere. They took sandwiches and coffee.

The Japanese weather report said mist and clouds south of Kamchatka cleared considerably in the last 24 hours. There was a light westerly wind, but in the vicinity of Saghalien Island, which they had to cross, clouds, rain, thunder and lightning were reported.

Hillig Takes "Surprise" Passenger to Berlin

Berlin, June 29 (AP)—Otto Hillig and Holger Hoirup, in their plane Liberty, flew to Tempelhof airdrome from Copenhagen today, bringing a "surprise passenger."

He is Frank Bridges, a friend of Hillig's from his home town of Liberty, N. Y., who welcomed them on their arrival in Copenhagen a few days ago.

The Danish ambassador and officials of Lufthansa, German air line, greeted the flier at the Berlin field.

Tomorrow they will go to Gera, Thuringia, and the following day visit Hillig's birthplace in Seinbrucke, Saxony, then come back to Berlin.

Nome Planes Ready to Guide World Fliers

Nome, Alaska, June 29 (AP)—Preparations to guide Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, globe-encircling fliers, were under way here today, with planes ready to take the air on their scheduled arrival in this vicinity and guide them to the landing field.

A fog that settled down here last night limited visibility.

Tents and beds were placed on the landing fields. Fuel and oil also was assembled for aid the fliers should they plan an immediate hop from here.

Mrs. Post and Hall Flying to New York

BABY SWALLOWS BOTTLE CAP BEFORE DOCTORS CAN GET IT

GULP PUTS TIN IN DANGEROUS POSITION

Operation May End a Chase Which Has City Hospital Staff Guessing

The metal cap of a tonic bottle, swallowed by a three-year-old Charlestown boy, is giving doctors at City Hospital a problem. For 36 hours it was caught in the throat of Graham Alfstrom of 37 Union st., Charlestown, but this morning it slipped through to the stomach.

The boy swallowed the cap Saturday night, but it lodged in such a way that it failed to cause trouble.

Early Sunday, however, John Alfstrom, the father, decided on hospital treatment. The doctors worked on the child from the time of admittance through yesterday, but without success.

DOCTORS ARE INTERESTED

They feared to operate because of the peculiar position the cap was in.

A veritable parade of doctors examined, probed and discussed the case, but the youthful patient seemed least concerned of any.

Dr. John J. Dowling, superintendent of the hospital, interested himself in the case today, one of the most unusual brought to the hospital in years. As things now stand, an operation will be extremely difficult.

CHILD TAKES IT EASY

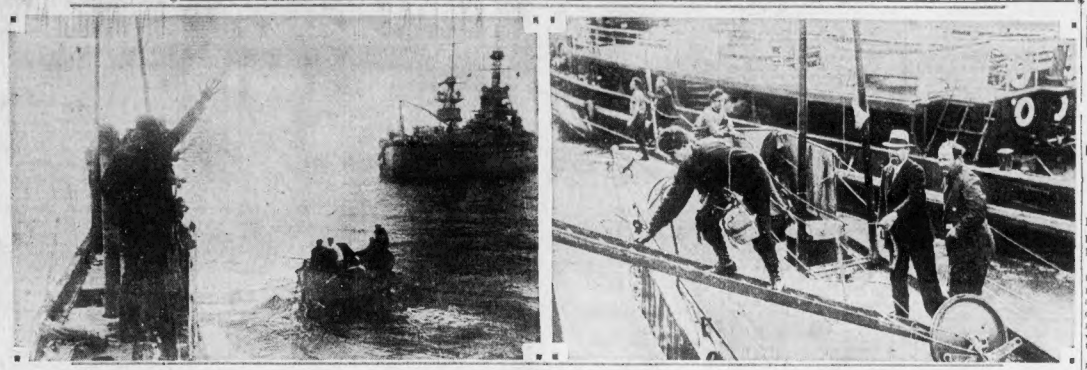

In spite of the new situation Dr. Dowling said the boy was "resting comfortably."

The cap cannot remain long in the stomach, he said, as develop ments might lead to poisoning.

In the event that all other means fail, an operation will be necessary.

GRAND JURY TO DIG OUT NEW MYSTERY

Private Detective So Far Refuses to Say Who Hired Him; the Suicide Note Is Genuine

New York, June 29—Starr Faithfull's suicide letters were pronounced genuine today by a handwriting expert.

At the same time it was revealed that the mysterious figures in background who have been conducting a private investigation into the death of the Greenwich Village play girl, through J. Irvin Smith, a private detective, will be identified to the grand jury.

Smith will be called before the grand jury tomorrow. He must name his clients or be held in contempt of court.

WORK ON PRIVATE LINES.

Operatives from Smith's agency have been seeking clues in Nassau County ever since the body of the girl was found on the sands of Long Beach.

Smith admitted to reporters that he was investigating the girl's death. He said that he had been retained privately to work independently of Dist. Atty. Elvin N. Edwards' investigation. He declines to say who had retained him.

The suicide letters were pronounced genuine by Albert D. Osborn, handwriting expert, in a report to Dist. Atty. Edwards.

HANDWRITING IS SAME.

His report confirmed a preliminary report made when the letters were brought back to America by Dr. G. Jamieson Carr, ship's surgeon on board the Franconia, with whom Starr was infatuated.

The handwriting in the letters exhibited the same characteristics as were outlined in a letter which the treasure-hunting maiden had written to her foster father, Stanley E. Faithfull, from London in 1930.

SAW GIRL ON SHIP CRYING

Mrs. Olive Davies, chief stewardess on the Franconia, said today that she saw Miss Faithfull on the liner Franconia at about 11:45 o'clock.

"She asked me if knew whether Dr. Carr was on the ship and said she wanted to see him," Mrs. Davies said. "I told her I didn't know. About two hours later I saw her on B deck promenade and she was leaning over the rail crying. She appeared to be hysterical.

"Then I met Francis Peabody Hamlin of Boston and told him about her. Mr. Hamlin went to her, and when he came back to me he said she would be all right. Later I saw Mr. Hamlin with her and I thought he was taking her to Dr. Carr."

Robert Edward Jones, chief steward on the Franconia, said he saw Starr still aboard the liner at 3:20 p. m.

BODY BRUISED

The report of Dr. Otto Schultz on the autopsy which he performed on the girl's body, was made public today. The report showed there was sand in the hair; blue-red marks on both cheeks, and another similar mark on the right temple. Numerous "scratch marks" about three-quarters of an inch in length were on the left side of the face.

On the right side of the neck was a long, diagonal red mark. Under the hair of the right eyebrow was an abrasion three inches long and a bluish-red discoloration. On the upper righ arm the flesh was soft and discolored. There were eight small blue-red marks on the lower right arm and 20 marks were on the right forearm. Four discolorations were on the right thigh and there were contusions on the calf of the right leg. The right knee was abrased.

Fine particles, probably sand, were found in the bronchial tubes and lungs and a wose-mortem rupture of the liver was discovered. There was said in the trachia also.

WILKINS HUNTS FOR SUB PART

Bergen, Norway, June 29 (AP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins, who arrived here yesterday, started back to England today and was cheered by crowds as he embarked.

With Prof. Sverdrup he started for Newcastle to continue consultations regarding the trip to the North Pole, which he hopes to make this summer in the submarine Nautilus.

Sir Hubert said he had been unable to find the missing spare part which he came to Bergen to get. Without this part, he said, he would be unable to utilize other material he has on hand for repairing the ship.

ONE MAN SAVES 63 IN REVERE

Sixty-three lives are dependent upon the services of Patrolman Theodore Snow of the Revere police department, it was discovered today. Standing behind Snow is the City of Revere, ready and willing to pay all bills necessary to save these lives.

Unless you've guessed it, there are seven cats involved.

Last week a family moved from 70 Waite pl., North Revere, to Saugus, and left the cats.

Patrolman Snow was attracted to the house by the cries of the felines, and reported the situation to Chief Edward J Tighe. Chief Tighe ordered Snow to care for the cats until the Animal Rescue was notified. Mayor Casassa said the city would pay the bills.

Kiss Microbes Are Beneficial--So There!

A Million of Jack's for a Million of Jill's; a Good Exchange, Says Medical Specialist

London, June 29 (INS)—Dr. Josiah Oldfield, noted English specialist and medical writer, says of kissing:

"It is the result of two sets of emotional cellular vibrations which attract each other . . . If Jack kisses Jill and transfers to her a million of his microbes, he gets in return a million of hers."

A columnist in the Morning Post adds:

"In the interests of scientific accuracy, I wish to point out that the doctor's statement is incomplete.

"If Jack kis_ss the modern Jill—in addition to her microbes, he enjoys the transference to his oral cavity of a quantity of crimson-colored insoluble viscous matter, largely composed of a mixture of pigmented paraffins and hydrocarbons of an oleaginous nature, impregnated with odoriferous alcoholic bodies.

"In other words, he gets a mouthful of lipstick."

Dr. Oldfield, in his definition of a kiss, added:

"A kiss should combine affection, respect and passion, and when any one of these ingredients is absent the kiss falls below its usual standard. Scaremongers who wish to abolish kissing say the habit transfers microbes from one person to another.

"From what we know of evolution, the probability is that this exchange of microbes is beneficial and not dangerous."

BOARDMAN HELD UP BY STORM

New York, June 29 (AP)—Three transatlantic planes, ready to hop for various parts of the eastern hemisphere were held back at Roosevelt Field today by reports of North Atlantic rainstorms.

Russell Boardman and John Polando of Boston expect to start their Constantinople flight tomorrow.

Pangborn and Herndon may take off today on a round-the-world flight.

'FAKE DOCTOR' FREE AGAIN

The elusive "Doctor" Carl R. G. Elfes, once a member of the medical staff at Worcester State Hospital, today slipped from the clutches of immigration authorities, who have been searching for him for four months.

Worcester police were notified he was in custody in Detroit, but declined to exercise the default warrant issued in Worcester court last February.

Within a few hours of his release by Detroit authorities Mrs. Anna C. Tillinghast, commissioner of immigration at Boston, was notified by newspapermen he had been allowed to depart. Mrs. Tillinghast then announced she had a warrant for his deportation to Germany as an impostor and undesirable alien. He claims to have been a German spy behind French lines during the war.

Elfes was discharged from the State Hospital staff last February when it was revealed that he had been arrested in Detroit and Chicago for practicing medicine without a license.

A blonde young woman, Mrs. Florence J. Hathaway of St. Paul, Minn., who had been posing as his wife, was arrested at the same time on a statutory charge. The doctor's bail of $1000 was forfeited when he failed to appear in Worcester court.

Soviet Grain Crop Set Back by Rain

Moscow, June 29 (INS)—The grain crop of Soviet Russia this year will probably be smaller than last year's bumper crop, due to cold and rain in June.

Isador Y. Lubimov, assistant commissar of foreign trade, now estimates a crop of 142,500,000 bushels less than his previous figure of 1,200,000,000, which is only 77 million bushels above last year, despite a greater planted area.

Reliable authorities assert that if Soviet Russia exports much wheat this fall, it will have to do so by slashing bread rations even more than was done last winter.

TEN KILLED IN SPAIN ELECTION

Madrid, June 29 (AP)—Despite strict censorship on dispatches telling of election disturbances, it was learned today that 10 persons were killed in uprisings attending yesterday's voting.

Major disturbances in the balloting, which, on the basis of incomplete returns, showed a victory for the Conservative Republican-Socialist bloc, occurred at Malaga, Seville and Prieves, near Granadalajara.

At Malaga three persons were killed and nine wounded. It was found necessary to declare martial law because of a general strike called in protest against the death of a workman in an election brawl.

Reports came from Seville of new agitation at Tablada airdrome, where reinforcements ordered out by Gen. Janjurpo again assumed control.

Provisional officials of the Spanish republic characterized partial election returns as "the death knell" of Monarchist efforts to return King Alfonso or any other claimant to the Spanish throne.

Political Madrid already has begun to hail Foreign Minister Lerroux as the next premier with the possibility Zamora will succeed himself as President.

Maj. Ramon Franco, who was accused by government officials of fomenting a revolt at Tablada airdrome on Saturday but denied he had done anything of the sort, started for Madrid today by airplane. It was reported he would be arrested on his arrival here and would be court-martialed in connection with the Tablada affair.

Alfonso Unconcerned Over Spanish Election

London, June 29 (AP)—Apparently unconcerned over yesterday's Spanish elections, which seemed to have virtually written "finis" to his career as King Alfonso XIII, the deposed monarch spent the weekend in the solusion of the country estate of friends.

Except for a brief appearance at the Wimbledon tennis matches, Alfonso has remained in the background while his subjects voted overwhelmingly for a republic and the Catalonian State voted equally strong for a separate State under the federal republic.

Alfonso is contemplating a trip to Fontainebleau, France, after which he will return to England with Queen Victoria.

Ohio Miner's Home Bombed in Strike

St. Clairsville, O., June 29 (AP)—A dynamite bomb was set off under the home of Harry Blackers, a working miner, at the Fairpoint mine of the Hanna Coal Co. here today, but Blackers, his wife and four children escaped injury.

Blackers obtained employment at the mine a month ago when the coal strike started.

GILLETTE SUIT OPENS FRIDAY

The $20,000,000 suit of minority stockholders against the board of directors of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. was postponed until Friday in Suffolk court today.

The suit comprises a bill in equity of Philip N. Jones and others against John E. Aldred, New York banker, King C. Gillette and others of the directorate.

The plaintiffs, owners of 1966 shares of the company, charge losses of nearly $21,000,000 that followed the merger last year of the Gillette and Auto Strop safety razor companies.

Beginning Friday, Judge William M. Fred, will sit as master in the case by appointment of Judge James B. Carroll of Massachusetts Supreme Court.

16 RUM SHIPS OFF COAST

New London, Ct., June 29 (INS)—Sixteen vessels lie along "rum row" today, according to reports brought in from the hazy regions far out beyond the mouth of the harbor. Contact boats, say the scouts, are more numerous than ever before, and are assumed to be waiting "the dark of the moon" before they match wits with the strong coast guard patrol force lying between "rum row" and the shores.

"All quiet along the front" was the report at coast guard headquarters today. Not a sign was had over the week-end of the speedy boats that are known to be out on the water.

Ice Cream Price Cut

Chicago, June 29 (US)—Chicago got a break today, despite the heat wave—ice cream sold at 29 cents a quart at soda fountains, the lowest in many years.

N. E. NOTABLES ON BREMEN LIST

More than 60 passengers from Boston and New England will be aboard the crack North German Lloyd liner Bremen when the vessel sails at 12:30 a. m. tomorrow from New York for Cherbourg, Southampton and Bremen, with a total passenger list of 1800.

New Englanders include Henry S. Howe, Robert Saltonstall, Jr., James B. Ayer, Jr., and Malcolm Bancroft, all of Harvard College; Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall of Boston and Shrewsbury, accompanied by Miss Gertrude Clarke, Miss Helen V. Burdick and James Ferguson; Walter M. Cabot and Paul Claflin of Canton; Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Segal of Boston; Prof. George B. Weston of Boston; Miss Mary G. BOYS BANG BABY WITH AIR GUNS

An ingenious idea for a target—but not a wise one—caused two Medford boys to lose their air rifles, which police seized.

The target was a baby carriage, and, as a baby was in it, there was a scream every time a shot found its mark.

It was as good as a target with a bell as far as the boys were concerned, but Mrs. Ida Rugg of 20A Orchard st., mother of the baby, soon learned what was going on, and notified the police.

There are 75 new air rifles in the police arsenal now, and two sad little boys in Medford Hillside.

BEAZELEYS VIEW THE SLAIN COUPLE

Thatcher Colt Holds Paddy Curtainwood, Brother of Widow, for Questioning, in Spite of Family Opposition

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"

I LOOKED around me restlessly. In this reception room of the rectory, the Reverend Timothy Beazley had no doubt received the members of his flock, come to take counsel with him in their emergencies. Here, too, perhaps, he had married young lovers.

I wanted desperately to light a cigarette, but that would have been indecent. My eyes dawdled around the walls. Here was a print from Dresden, a fat and amiable Virgin and Child by Albrecht Altdorfer called "Mari mit dem Kinde in der Glorie."

On the opposite wall was a colored etching of Andrea del Sarto's mild and earthly "Holy Family with Elizabeth and the Boy John." From these and all other of the room's furnishings, my eyes were drawn back irresistibly to the canvas over the fireplace. Intently I studied that portrait in oil, of the good-looking, if rather rotund young man who had been the Reverend Timothy Beazeley.

The subject's shortness of stature had been concealed by the artist. He must have loved to depict muscular power, and had practiced in a good life-class, for in this painting there was a feeling of rebellious strength, of power and adventurous enterprise vibrating in a young body, yet bound in the vestments of an irksome austerity.

Perhaps I put into the picture what was already in my mind. But the face was unmistakably revealing. In spite of himself, perhaps, the artist had done the opposite of what he had been hired to accomplish. The picture exposed the clergyman in the strength of his body and the weakness of his charming face.

A VOLUPTUARY

More than a priest, Beazeley looked like a Hollywood leading man. The face showed a pious and good-humored benevolence, plainly enough; a look of spiritual indifference and condescension that might presage a bishop in the future; implicit in the painted face were even the canonical essentials of shrewdness and practicality. Still the sweetness of Beazeley's smile, as painted there, did not hide from my suspicions a deep dissatisfaction with life.

Perhaps my fancy was skylarking as I studied the picture; in any case I was the prey of disagreeable impressions. Upon the dead face in the boat I had looked with pity and horror. But here in this portrait I thought I saw a sensualist.

My mind conjured up as companions for this image the faces of Doctor Hall, and Richeson, and Father Schmidt—a creature torn between concupiscence and ecclesiastical ambition, a man bound on sacerdotal oaths and still a voluptuary. And I found myself itching to retouch that painted face, putting powder marks in the middle of that forehead, and a round black hole, smearing with crimson the smiling face—

A man came suddenly into the parlor and interrupted my musings. Ignoring me, he strode boldly up to Thatcher Colt.

"I am Gerald Curtainwood," he announced in a brittle, authoritative voice; "Mrs. Beazeley's brother. What is the trouble?"

Colt looked at him for a moment before replying. Gerald Curtainwood was a short, heavy-set man, with a strong face, heavy jaws and dressed with fastidious elegance. He had his sister's Alpine blue eyes, and there was a resemblance, too, in his deliberate movements and in the cold detachment of his voice.

CONTRADICTORY

Colt told him exactly what had happened. Curtainwood listened intently, but with no visible sign of emotion. His beard Colt to the swift end of his hurried narrative.

"It is horrible. It is incredible! It sounds impossible," was his comment, uttered in a passionless voice.

"Have you any idea who the woman might be, Mr. Curtainwood?"

"Certainly not. I do not know what to think about the facts as you tell them—except that the woman could not possibly have played any part in my brother-in-law's life. Beazeley devotedly in love with his wife."

Colt said nothing of the love-letter found in the boat. Instead, he asked:

"Will Mrs. Beazeley be ready presently?"

"For what?"

"To go with you—and us—to the Morgue."

"Mr. Commissioner, is that necessary? I can go, but why Mrs. Beazeley?"

"Sorry, Curtainwood. It is necessary for those bodies to be legally identified. The widow must come to the Morgue and look at her husband."

Like a man of ice Gerald Curtainwood looked at the police commissioner. Outwardly he was calm, yet I felt near to some chained, destroying passion held back by an overmastering will. A strong, proud people, these Curtainwoods, with feelings too intense safely to be let loose.

So, while Gerald Curtainwood inwardly raged at Colt's orders, outwardly he became as austere as a Sioux Indian accepting the inevitable with dignity. Without a word he left us only to reappear presently leading his sister by the arm. A piece of thin veiling was drawn over the silver silk of the widow's hair, and knotted loosely at her throat. Behind her, chuggling a straw hat with a pink and white polka-dot band, came Paddy, whose eyes seemed persistently attracted to Thatcher Colt.

A COLD GLANCE

As we emerged to the front steps of the ivy-fronted house, two policemen were standing at attention. Upon Colt's orders they had been summoned from the precinct station-house nearby. They received the mourners under police guard; none could come and go freely through its doors without a full account of their business; nor could any objects be removed without their knowledge and consent. And so it must be until the police inquiry was ended.

Mrs. Beazeley glanced coldly at the patrolmen but she asked no questions. Colt escorted the three of them to the door of his car and saw them seated. Then he returned to the steps and addressed one of the patrolmen.

"Is Officer Cook here?"

A third policeman stepped from the shadows to the left of the steps and saluted. Colt questioned him in a low tone.

"Cook—did you notice anything unusual going on around this house tonight?"

"No, sir."

"Nothing?"

"Well, just before I went off post—I guess it was about half-past eleven—I happened to be passing and noticed several people going into the house but I didn't pay much attention."

"Men or women?"

UNSHAKEN FORTITUDE

"Both, I think, I'm not sure—I don't remember particularly—but I know I saw them."

"Very well."

Now Colt and I clambered into the automobile and Neil McMahon drove us back to 29th St. Not a word was spoken by our three passengers; not a whispered syllable passed among themselves. The strength of pride seemed to fortify them.

With the same unshaken fortitude, the widow and her two brothers descended with us to that room in the Morgue's lower regions where the boat and its two bodies were exposed. Of all the brigade from Headquarters there were left only one detective-sergeant from the Homicide Squad and a patrolman in uniform.

Colt and I were watching closely as Elizabeth Curtainwood Beazeley and her brothers, Gerald and Paddington, stepped up to the boat. Not a cry came from any of the three. Like creatures from another world they looked down upon the inanimate figures. Their silence, prolonged immobility, was nerve-racking. Finally, Gerald touched the widow's arm, and they turned in concert, their backs to the boat, and faced the Police Commissioner.

"That is my husband," announced Mrs. Beazeley clearly.

"The Reverend Timothy Beazeley?"

She nodded, and for one instant the firm lips trembled.

"And the other? Do you know her?"

The widow closed her eyes, and seemed to inhale defiance. Gerald answered for her:

"Yes. I recognize her."

"The name?"

BOTH IDENTIFIED

"Her name is Sanders or Saunders. She attends services in our church. But she had never been admitted to membership."

"How long has she been attending services there?" from Colt.

"Oh, only recently. Not more than three or four years at the outside."

"Know where she lives?"

"I happen to. You see, as one of the vestrymen of our church, I have a mailing list—"

"Where does Mrs. Saunders live?"

"At 24 Lame Man's Court."

"Lame Man's Court?"

"Yes."

"Where is that?"

"It is a small court that runs off 56th st., like a little cul-de-sac."

"Know anything about her family?" Colt asked, looking somberly at Gerald Curtainwood.

"I believe her husband, William Saunders, is a night-watchman—or something of that sort," replied the brother. A trace of petulance was in his voice, already he was resenting the necessity of answering questions. "And she has a young daughter named Isabel," he added.

Colt's eyes encountered, in succession, the resolute gaze of Gerald Curtainwood; the bleak stare of Mrs. Beazeley, and finally the furtive, watchful glance of her afflicted brother.

"Swartz," said Colt, "go to Lame Man's Court. Put a guard in the house—nothing is to be taken out. Get William Saunders or his daughter Isabel—both if possible. Bring them here to make a legal identification. Then take them directly to my home on W. 70th st."

"Right!"—and Schwartz hastened off without a backward glance.

"And now," added Colt, turning back to the family group, "I shall be obliged if you will accompany me to my home."

"You may I speak with you aside for a minute?" asked Gerald.

"Very well. You come, too, Tony."

Out of earshot of his own relatives, Gerald said:

"I want you to understand about my poor brother, Paddington."

"What about him?" asked Colt.

"Well, you must have guessed our younger brother is not as strong as other people. He is not insane. Just a little simple-minded."

"And why are you telling me that?" asked Colt.

"Because I want you to let him go home to bed."

"Impossible!" said Colt.

"But what can he tell you?" buried Curtainwood.

"That is what I want to find out," replied Thatcher Colt.

Oliver Ditson Building Sold

Sale of the Oliver Ditson Building in Tremont st., valued at $1,160,000, was announced today with A. W. Perry, Inc., the buyers.

The ten-story office and store building was built in 1916 by the late Charles Ditson to house the musical firm of Oliver Ditson Co. The company holds a long term lease on the building. Albert J. Lovett and William D. Sohier, trustees of the Sohier Real Estate Trust, were the sellers through the brokerage firm of C. W. Whittier & Bro.

Boston Bathers Come First With Lynch

A city ordinance which would give preference to citizens of Boston in obtaining bathing facilities at the L-street baths in South Boston, was asked in an order filed with the City Council today by Councillor William Lynch. Action followed a protest by South Boston citizens that they were unable to obtain accommodations because of the large number of visitors from outside the city.

"Old Ironsides" Moved to Pier 4

The U. S. frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides," was moved today from pier 2 at the navy yard to pier 4, to be commissioned during exercises Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Judge Curtis D. Wilbur, under whom as Secretary of the Navy the work of reconditioning started, will be the speaker. Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton, commandant of the yard, said today 27,221 persons have visited the ship since April 25.

Many Dainty Dishes With Crabmeat

By Martha Lee

TRY THIS COMBINATION CRAB SALAD ON YOUR GUESTS

First catch a can of Japanese crabmeat —you'll find it extra delicious.

Combine the crabmeat with chopped celery, tomato and mayonnaise and seasonings.

This salad on crisp lettuce with coffee and cookies make a perfect luncheon.

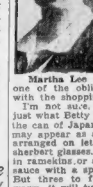

isn't very long ago that I learned that I mustn't throw away the precious liquid contained inside the parchment paper. This liquid is really the protein of the crab which has been extracted in cooking and should be returned to the meat after the spines have been removed.

Here's the how of the crab meat salad that's illustrated today.

Remove the spines from one cup of Japanese crab meat. Add ½ cup of finely diced celery and 1 large tomato, which has been peeled, seeds removed and tomato cut into small pieces. Season to taste with salt, paprika and a dash of cayenne pepper. Add ¼ cup of mayonnaise dressing. Mix thoroughly and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

One of the obliging office family with the shopping list.

I'm not sure, until I get home, just what Betty is going to do with the can of Japanese crab meat. It may appear as a luscious cocktail, arranged on lettuce leaves in low sherbert glasses, or perhaps deviled in ramekins, or au gratin in cream sauce with a sprinkling of cheese. But three to five, if the day is warm, it will turn into one of our favorite salads, in combination with celery and tomatoes.

This is the salad that's illustrated for you today on this page, and because it's delicious, easy to make and not too expensive, I hope you'll try it out with your family soon.

KEEP CANS ON HAND

Perhaps you won't have to send to the store for the Japanese crab meat. Perhaps you are far-sighted and fore-sighted homemaker who always has two or three cans of Japanese crab meat on her emergency shelf for just such occasions. I always intend to, but somehow Japanese crab meat disappears in my house before you can wink. We're especially fond of the Japanese crab because the flavor is so delicious and the large pieces of firm meat are so colorful. And it

8 CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMES

Jonquieres, Que., June 29 (AP)—Eight children were burned to death today when the home of Xavier Potvin, a farmer, caught fire.

The youngsters, ranging in age from one to eleven, were trapped in their sleeping quarters in the upper part of the house.

Potvin tried vainly to reach them but was driven back by the smoke.

Blanket Kept His Engine Altogether Too Dry

While Jacob A. Caldwell of McKinley terrace, Lynn, was driving his coupe on Broad st., Lynn, heavy smoke poured from under the hood of the engine. The fire apparatus responded to an alarm pulled in and found a blanket blazing over the engine.

"Gee," said Caldwell, "I put that blanket in to keep the coils from getting wet from the rain, and I forgot to take it out." The damage was confined to the blanket.

Four Held for Trial, Fifth in Hospital

Four men were held in bail of $1000 each for hearing July 8 by Judge Joseph Carr in municipal court today, after being arraigned on charges of participating in an affray.

According to police, a fifth man, Michael J. McDermott, 38, of Walnut ave., Roxbury, is in the hospital with a fractured skull as a result of being set upon by the four defendants in Castle sq. early today. The men are: Cornelius Carroll, 20, of Shepard ave., John Hannon, 30, of the same address, Patrick Corcoran, 25, or Chalmers st., and Michael Dering of West Canton st.

Ex-Harvard Star Is Fined in Auto Case

Joseph F. Cunningham, 24, of Canton st., Milton, former Harvard football star, was fined $200 in Waltham district court today by Judge Michael J. Connolley, after being found guilty of driving while under the influence of liquor.

Cunningham was found not guilty of drunkenness a week ago, at which time Benjamin Tickner, captain of last fall's Harvard football squad, testified in his behalf. The continuance of a week was granted so that Cunningham could bring into court a young woman who was with him on the night he was arrested in Waltham.

600 ON SHIPS IN N. Y. CRASH

New York, June 26 (AP)—The steamer Mandalay, bound for Atlantic Highlands, N. J., with 500 passengers, collided this afternoon with the steamer Chippewa, bearing 100 passengers for Bedloe's Island.

The Chippewa was struck amidships and a fireboat took off her passengers, after which the Chippewa proceeded to her pier. No one was reported injured.

Both steamers had just left the battery when the collision occurred.

Goat Sees Own Image, Goes Into Action; 1 Door Shattered

A stray goat, wandering along Beacon st., Everett, today caught its own reflection in the polished door of an automobile, and went into action.

When the owner, Richard Courtney of Everett, returned to the car he found the door in splinters and the goat resuming its way with wobbly but none the less haughty steps. Courtney combed the neighborhood to find the owner of the goat.

Joseph Y. Schooner Dies in Brookline

Joseph Y. Schooner, widely known in Boston investment circles, is dead at his home in St. Paul st., Brookline. He was a member of several charitable organizations. He is survived by his wife the former Miss Carrie R. Raphael.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Temple Ohabei Shalom, Brookline.

2 Charlestown Men Held on Rum Charges

Arthur H. Myers and John O'Halloran, both of Charlestown, were held in $1000 each in federal court today on charges of illegal sale of liquor.

Federal agents testified to having made purchases at the building in Warren st., Charlestown, occupied by the two men.

HAYS IS ACCUSED OF ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

Bridgeport, Ct., June 29 (AP)—The Bridgeport Telegram, in a copyrighted interview with the Rev. George Reid Andrews, today quoted the minister as charging Will Hays with spending money widely to prevent attacks on the motion picture industry by the Federal Council of Churches, and saying the council had once prevented the production of a picture which "would have scandalized the Christian world."

Rev. Mr. Andrews was formerly chairman of the Church and Drama Association of the council. In his interview he charged Hays undertook to buy me by generous offers of secret money, and intending through me to control the organizations with which I was connected and manipulate them to his own advantage in his efforts to prevent effective criticism of the movies." He further expressed indignation that his colleagues in the association had "succumbed to the lure of movie money" and declared he was forced to resign through "political pressure."

RUNAWAY WIFE FOUND DYING

Springfield, June 29—Mrs. Hazel Dahlke, 23, of 2473 Main st., mother of two children, was found unconscious in Calhoun Park, early today.

It has been learned hat Mrs. Dahlke left her husband and two small children in Meriden, Ct., about two months ago, and came to this city to live.

Police have a tip that a large auto was seen to stop, a short time before, near where she was found on the bench.

Detective Sergt. Thomas J. Kelliher reached the husband, Henry Dahlke of Meriden, by telephone. According to Kelliher, Dahlke said he would not come to see his wife.

"She left me, although I provided a good home for her," said the husband, according to Kelliher.

Policewomen Mary F. Lathrop and H. Elizabeth O'Connor will question Mrs. Dahlke as soon as possible.

Hospital officials stated it was case they had ever seen. The woman became partially conscious and began to tal kdisjointedly at an early hour today.

It was admitted that most of her talk was incoherent but officials state she mentioned a man's name several times during her raving before she again lapsed into unconsciousness.

cities than 136,000 Cantonese marching along the ground.

In New York City colored men, and some whites, paraded in protest against the proposed execution of eight Negroes in Alabama, one of them a boy in his teens.

The eight Negroes are to be killed on the complaint of two white women that were traveling in a freight car in which the Negroes stole a ride. The character of the women is not made clear and it is suggested that if the eight men had been white they would not have been punished. It would seem desirable to clear up that point.

The parade in Harlem, New York, emphasized the turning against religion that has recently been conspicuous in many places, Mexico, Spain, Italy, and lately in the state of Vera Cruz, where a new law restricts the number of priests to ten, or only one for 100,000 population.

The old fashioned signs in the parade read, "Smash the Legal Lynching" and "Death to Lynchers."

A new kind of sign read, "Defend the Soviet Union," although it is not clear what the Soviet union has to do with the execution of eight Alabama Negroes. And another sign, evidently inspired by agnosticism, read, "Work and Pray, Live on Hay, You'll Eat Pie in the Sky, When You Die."

New York hotel keepers find an improvement in public methods of dealing with gangsters and racketeers.

The general public does not know how important a part the United States Treasury plays in discouraging the higher-up criminals. The latter are financiers on a big scale, and make huge profits, in some cases millions a year for single individuals.

The income tax department traces the huge winnings, wants to know why no report has been made, and so tax paid, collects one-half of the money and sends the criminal financiers to jail.

The Treasury Department has broken up the worst of Chicago's gangs and has the most dangerous ringleaders on their way to jail, something that Chicago's police could not do, for reasons NOT mysterious.

TWO POLICEMEN ACCUSED OF VICE GRAFT

file, containing photographs of girls together with their names and addresses, the latter in code.

"SUCKER LIST"

The majority of these girls come from Maine, Rhode Island and New York.

The file was seized by police undercover investigators, together with a so-called "sucker list" containing names and telephone numbers of numerous men residing in Greater Boston and Massachusetts.

The girl who made the charges has told police officials her entire life story, particularly with reference to the past seven months, which she has spent in Boston.

She has revealed to whom she paid money and when, and how she was induced to come to this city. She has told how girls on the indexed list were communicated with and brought to Boston.

Also how the "sucker list" was used when men were sought for the purpose of obtaining money.

The girl is Mary Sawyer, who was arrested Saturday night with two other women and four men in an Essex st. hotel.

At the time of her arrest she claimed to have previously procured immunity by paying $60 to two police officers.

GIRL DETAINED.

So serious were her charges that Capt. William Lewis at headquarters was asked to have her detained in the House of the Good Shepherd, instead of the House of Detention, pending her appearance in court.

The girl was taken to the office of Deputy McDevitt under guard today and questioned at length. It was understood she said she could recognize the accused officers on sight.

As a result it is believed a lineup will be ordered at the Lagrange st. station which covers the district in which the hotel is located.

The Sawyer girl will then be given an opportunity to pick out the policemen to whom she claims to have paid the money.

MAY REVEAL OTHERS

It is expected that the investigation now under way from headquarters may reveal similar instances of women claiming to have paid vice money to police for protection.

The arrests at the hotel were made by a headquarters raiding squad, apparently without the knowledge of the police of the Lagrange st. station. The raid is expected to result in the vacating of the building by the proprietor.

Another result of the girl story, it was learned, will be an investigation of a white slave ring operating in several states.

According to the police, Mary Sawyer, with Helen King and Hazel Murphy, the other two girls arrested in the raid, as well as several other women, were imported from New York, Providence and Fall River.

Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to the police department, made a complaint against the hotel some time ago. At that time, according to Schwartz, an agreement was reached whereby the proprietor agreed to vacate if there were any further violations of the law.

Atty. Schwartz today called for the papers in connection with the raid, and was prepared to demand that the hotel proprietor live up to his agreement.

GIRL'S STORY.

The Sawyer girl was the only one of those arrested in the raid who was unable to obtain bail. She told headquarters men, they say, that the previous week she had been caught with two men by two officers and had paid them $60, which she borrowed from the hotel proprietor.

As a result of this payment, according to her story, she was not prosecuted.

Through her counsel, Atty. Joseph F. McDonough of 40 Court st., the Sawyer girl revealed she came from Bangor, Me.

Through Atty. McDonough she agreed to remain in the House of the Good Shepherd until her appearance in court.

PROPRIETOR ARRAIGNED

Max J. Benstock, 44, proprietor of the hotel, was arraigned before Judge Charles Carr in Municipal Court on six complaints. He was charged with maintaining a disorderly house, of deriving support from immoral women, of having illicit medical instruments in his possession, with having obscene photographs, failure to keep the hotel register properly and allowing persons to occupy rooms without being registered.

He pleaded not guilty to all complaints, being represented by Attorney James Cassidy. On the charge of deriving support from women he was held in $1000 for a hearing one week from today. On the other charges he was held in his own recognizance.

Sortara Nishivaria, 25, also arrested in the raid, pleaded guilty to a statutory offense and was placed on probation for one year. His counsel was Attorney Bernard J. Killion.

WAITS FOR POLICE PROBE

Arraigned on the same charge, Pedro Abyar pleaded not guilty and his case was continued one week.

Judge Carr refused to grant a complaint charging the hotel with being a common nuisance until the police investigation is completed.

Attorney J. Friedberg, who said he represented the corporation, formerly owners of the hotel, stated it had not been maintained by the corporate owners since May 3.

Tiny Plane Flies Africa to England

Hesdon, England, June 29 (AP)—Long-distance flying trips are becoming quite common, but officials of the airport here were slightly surprised when a small plane landed yesterday and the occupants announced they had come from South Africa.

The fliers were Richard Humble and his wife, who made the trip to explore the trade possibilities of the route.

Latin-American Relations Discussed

Earle K. James of New York, editor of "Chile," held the same point of view.

Parboiled Fish Leaps Into Rescue Craft

St. Joseph, Mo., June 29 (AP)—Fire Chief Urbanski went out on a mission of mercy and came home with a boatload of par-boiled fish.

He gave the thirsty fish of a lake that was almost dried up by the sun their first taste of cool water in several days yesterday and they went on a spree. Before the chief could get ashore 150 pounds of disporting fish jumped into his boat.

2 Unhurt as Huge Truck Crashes

Palmer, June 29 (AP)—A 13-ton truck left the road a mile east of here today and crashed into the office building of a miniature golf course, knocking the building off its foundation. The impact overturned the truck and the two occupants, Morris Kravitz and Frank Kaufman, both of Chelsea, climbed from the cab, unhurt.

The trip lasts a week and the boys will be guests en route of business clubs and chambers of commerce.

Tobaccos like these require no parching

What good would it do to wrap Camel cigarettes in moisture-proof Cellophane if all of the natural moisture had been parched out beforehand?

Parching, as you probably know, is a high heat process sometimes used in an attempt to reduce the burn and bite of harsh strong tobaccos.

Camels, on the other hand, are a blend of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos that are so ripe, mild and cool they need no artificial treatment.

Parching tobaccos like these is unnecessary. It could only destroy their delightful aroma and flavor.

We use the Humidor Pack of moisture-proof Cellophane to preserve every vestige of that original flavor. It prevents the loss of natural moisture by evaporation, keeping Camels factory-fresh wherever you buy them.

This air-seal also makes the cigarettes germ-proof, dust-proof and taint-proof.

If you aren't a Camel smoker, switch over to this brand for one whole day. After you have learned how cool and mild they are, how flavorful and fresh, go back to your old brand—if you can.

IT IS WITH GENUINE PLEASURE THAT WE UNFOLD the picture of Kitty Burrage's wedding for you today, and years hence when we are delving into the files for the social history of 1931, the sweet and happy bride of Tim Clark will become a tradition.

MRS. FORRESTER CLARK

Since her debut in December at the beautiful orchid ball, Miss Kitty has been one of the most feted girls of her season, and for beauty, grace and sweet winsomeness she had no peer, few equals. Her engagement to Forrester Clark was a real love match; she was the happiest looking bride we have had the pleasure of greeting this summer.

In her bridal gown, on long princess lines with train four yards or more sweeping up the aisle, her golden brown hair showing beneath a tiny seed pearl cap from which flowed a voluminous tulle veil, a large cluster of virgin spray orchids as her only adornment, she was the embodiment of the ideal bride. And Mr. Tim looked so proud of her that all his dimples showed—yes, he is six feet something, very handsome and has dimples.

* * *

The church was a fairy glen of greenery, lilies and roses banking the altar, festooning the windows through which the sun shone beautifully and marking the pews. It was the proper setting for the prince and princess in the fairy tale, and we just know they are going to live happily ever afterward.

Reception Held at Picturesque Brookwood

THE REV. NELSON P. CAREY, THE SO KIND AND well-loved rector of St. John's at Beverly Farms, conducted the first part of the marriage service, Dr. William Greenough Thayer officiated at the altar and Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill gave the benediction. From the chancel the choir sang a song of joy and peace, and Mr. and Mrs. Forrester A. Clark went back to Brookwood, the charming country home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage, to greet their many friends and well-wishers.

THE HOUSE IS BUILT around a courtyard and terrace with fountain in center, from which one goes down a few steps into the interior, which is of Spanish-Italian influence, parquet floor, plaster walls and dark, beamed ceilings. In this huge living room, banked with flowers, the wedding party received. Mrs. Burrage, Kitty's mother, was lovely in rose-beige lace and hat to match, and Miss Alice, another daughter of the family who will make her bow two years hence, was sweet and girlish in French blue. All of the debutantes in the bridesmaids' group were of the prettiest of the season and it made one of the most beautiful processions we have ever seen.

Mrs. Russell Burrage

OUT ON THE TERRACE Ruby Newman's popular orchestra played softly while the guests partook of a real wedding feast, lobster salads, chicken in aspic, sandwiches a la everything, and plenty of the cup that cheers. The bride and bridegroom with their attendants sat at a T-shaped table gorgeously decorated with tiny figures, a bridal couple driving away with horses drawn by white ribbons, and a huge bridal cake.

ALL THE DEBS OF THIS year were out to give Kitty a rousing send-off and crowds of Tim's friends drank his health. As both of these young people are decidedly popular with the world which calls itself society, you can imagine it was some party. Over all Grandfather Burrage and his sweet wife beamed their approval of everything. Mrs. Burrage very becomingly costumed in grey. Even the pheasants, which are one of the interesting features of Brookwood, were preened for the occasion, and caused not a little interest as they strutted up and down in their enclosures.

FROM HAMILTON WE SAW Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, Mr. and Mrs. John Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hubbard (Betty Moulton), who is expecting the stork soon, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus F. Goodwin and their newly married daughter, Mrs. Joseph Woods and Mr. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Means with daughter Alice. We also caught a glimpse of Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer, who is Tim Clarke's godmother. Happy days!

WE HEAR THAT BEN TICKNOR is very keen about Barbara Farmer, who was one of Peggy Reed Batchelder's bridesmaids. Miss Barbara hails from Hartford, daughter of the Malcolm Farmers. She has an uncle in Boston, Allen Farmer, of pearl necklaces, pearl necklaces only, pearls and more pearls, if you know whom we mean.

About people you know in Boston stores

—By FRANCIS BAIRD—

Boston retail stores are the first in the country to adopt the simplification of wrapping and packing supplies as recommended by the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce. This system is approved also by the store managers' division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

At a meeting of purchasing agents for several of the large stores, held last week at the Retail Trade Board, this plan was accepted by the following representatives: T. F. McGrath for Conrad's, C. T. Bates for Filene's, E. M. Donaher for Shepard's, G. E. Hunter for Jordan's and Hovey's, J. W. Tracy for Hollander's, Fred Vorenberg for Gilchrist's, J. J. McCarthy for Slattery's, and N. T. Allen for White's.

The new system applies to millinery, notion bags, folding and corrugated boxes.

LONG'S PLAN OUTING

About 100 members of Long's Employe's Association will enjoy their annual outing at the Assabet Country Club, Stowe, July 11.

Events planned for the day include a golf and tennis tournament, baseball game, races, canoe events and dancing.

A. A. Anderson, of the diamond department, heads the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Florence Heath, Miss Mary Taddia, Miss Margaret Crowley, Arthur Stewart, Aaron Wolk and Ray Clark, advertising manager. Miss Ella Mellen is president of the Association.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Miss Ella Barnier, store nurse, was unanimously elected chairman of the "Sunshine" committee of the Hovey Associates Mutual Benefit Association at the annual meeting of the directors. Miss Louise Tappan, financial secretary, was chosen as her assistant, with a representative on each floor of the store. Dr. S. M. Fitchett will continue as medical advisor.

Miss Bernier also heads the claim committee, with Blanche Leighton, Louise Tappan, Ashton Getchell and Lillian Montgomery.

The directors are Mary St[illegible]pke, Fred Godutl, Mary Hurley, John Grimes, Leonard Wilson, Edward Ryan, William McCabe, Roy Hall, Edward Gaughran and David Leahy. F. W. Belcher, service manager, is president of the association.

MISS FANNY MOORE, who has come to the North Shore for the summer, was the guest of Mrs. Joseph Woods, Jr., at the race meeting.

Miss Meade to Wed on Cape

Tuesday, at noon, Miss Martha Montague Meade is to become the bride of Mr. William Ladd Hallowell in St. Andrew's-by-the-Sea, Hyannisport. Miss Meade, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Jennings Meade of Washington, D. C., after attending school in Great Barrington, was presented during the season of 1927-28 in New York.

The bride's only attendant will be Mr. Hallowell's sister, Miss Eleanor Hallowell, a sub-deb daughter of Mrs. John White Hallowell of Brush Hill rd., Milton, and her other son, John White Hallowell, Jr., will be his brother's best man.

A reception will be held at the Meade summer home in South Yarmouth.

Hats Aslant Is New Keynote

By ANN ARDEN

WHETHER FOR dress or sport, the white hat walks off with the honors this season. For so many summers white hats were limited to stiff straws, or uninteresting fabric versions. Now we can do white in almost any of the millinery mediums and stand foremost in the ranks of fashion.

* * *

TO GIVE variety to the amazingly popular turban or beret, these small, but important creations are showing a penchant for novelty materials and that swathed about in a novel way. Posed on the head with the right dash, these small confections can be perfectly thrilling, and since a tip-tilt angle, decidely on one side, is the correct note of the moment, the coiffure becomes more important than ever.

FINE TUCKING goes ahead in the fashion vanguard, and the chic little turban pictured is of all-over tucked white mousseline, cleverly draped and folded. This for formal wear, of course, accented by the fur scarf of white fox fur, and the very French touch of one white pearl earring.

MESHES OF all sorts are rampant in summer clothes, and their possibilities seem limitless. Its attractiveness lies in its pliability and cool airiness. Decidedly effective is the Le Mounier model pictured of white boucle and fish net, sharply aslant upon the head, and topped with an amusing pom-pon. These pert affairs will unquestionably hold their own in the fashion spotlight for some time to come. They are ideal for city wear, week-ending and travelling; are proof against summer breezes, and take up the minimum amount of space in hat box or suit case.

UNDENIABLY, the white turbans are most flattering, and because they are worn perched to one side leaving so much of the hair showing, the hair becomes almost a trimming, that is when it is cleverly handled.

Never have they marked their truly unusual and distinctive hats at such a low price! Right in the height of the season — Just before the "Fourth!" And, of course, you'll want a new hat for the holiday! They have those fascinating "cartwheel" hats for only $1.95 up. And if you would like a hat moulded to your head — Miss Nurenberg, an expert at moulding, will give you her personal attention, moulding it at a very low price and completing it while you wait. Hats remodeled for only $2.50. A group of dresses for all occasions is specially priced at only $9.75. The Rose Hat Shoppe, 453 Washington St., in the Dexter Bldg., on the 3rd floor, Room 308.

So There, My Anne,

You'll have scads more money to spend over the Holiday—and scads more clothes than you ever dreamed of owning if you mark well the exciting values I've told you about! I think I've found some of the very best bargains in Boston! Old man weather is giving us plenty of opportunities to wear the lovely things I've given you news of—and I think that if you take the sage advice of your Priscilla—your vacation days will be much happier.

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

COLD FURNACES FOR FUTURE HOUSE

—By Gilbert Seldes—

When the name and the idea of a ladder industry began to be popular a few months ago, a great many people began at once to think of some luxury, something totally unnecessary, which could be manufactured and sold in large quantities, the object being prosperity. It is probably true that a kind of prosperity would return for a time if every household in America bought a galvanized iron piano. Good economists are, however, skeptical; they cling to the old-fashioned notion that waste is a rocky road to wealth.

New Houses

In the New Republic, during the last month, a controversy has been waged over a solid fundamental necessity of living—the house. Mr. Douglas Haskell, formerly associated with the Architectural Record, has declared his faith in the "mechanical house"; Mr. Lewis Mumford, one of the most intelligent and spirited of our critics, is skeptical. Between them they suggest not only what engineers are thinking about for the house of the future, but imply that this new house, factory-made, may be the actual ladder of prosperity. New houses for new families were part of the "20-year plan" sketched by President Hoover and, as usual, there is the rumor that Henry Ford is "interested."

Metal and Glass in 1940

A metal and glass house was shown in New York last winter and has since, I believe, been erected somewhere on Long Island, although no one has yet written little poems to the glow of its artificial firelight and the patter of tiny feet on its sound-insulated floors. It looked pretty severe and not particularly comfortable, whereas most houses of the present look over decorated and actually aren't comfortable. Mr. Haskell's house of the future—and you may live in it by 1940—is going to be an engineer's delight, and it will be up to the individual dweller to use its mechanical perfection for the purposes of a pleasant life.

The first point he makes is that a trans-Atlantic liner or a Pullman car is technically superior to any building. The Bremen, he says, undergoes a pounding which would crumble the Empire State Building, yet the ship weighs only one-twelfth as much per cubic foot. The walls of a Pullman, which is virtually a home for thousands of people, are only half as thick as the walls of a residence, and the latest ones are sound-proof and carry conditioners for air.

Two-Way Furnaces

I do not know whether the house-planners care for suggestions from laymen—from the unfortunate individuals who have nothing to do with houses except to live in them. But we have all lived in houses all of our lives and we ought to have the right to murmur a few words. My own murmur, and I can shout it if necessary, is against the one-way system of making houses habitable. Since the time of Franklin we have had thousands of mechanisms for making our houses warm; we still lack a simple, inexpensive, universally adaptable machine for making our houses cool. It is true that we would die of cold and manage to survive the heats of summer; but as practical people we know that our energies sag, our spirits droop, in midsummer heats. Department stores and theaters offer isles of refuge; but until every apartment has a cooling system as a matter of course, we cannot give the house builders full marks.

Mr. Haskell speaks of "devices other than windows for ventilation" and we already have a fair substitute for sunlight, so that glass will eventually serve only the purpose of letting us spy on our neighbors. As for heat, we shall turn a switch and a room will become warm just as now it becomes light when we press a button—that is, instantly. And kitchens and bathrooms will be made as units. (The plumber and the jokes about plumbers will simply disappear). You will consult a catalogue, go to a show room, and order frame unit No. 45-a, bathroom No. 38.54, walls and windows and everything else in the same way.

Planning Needed

Mr. Mumford's criticism is that we may get the house, but we will not know what to do with it. Throw it on the market now, in the present chaos of town planning and community building, and we will still have long rows of unbeautiful houses, each shutting off some of its neighbor's light and air, each an element in ugliness and discomfort, each sold under high-pressure salesmanship which will make the cost prohibitive.

A House on a Mast

The best answer I've heard of is the house designed by Mr. Buckminster Fuller. It is meant for mass production and is almost as mobile as the motor car; although it is not on wheels, it can be taken down, moved away, and put up again in three days. It defies all our ideas of house construction, because it stands on a mast and the first liveable floor is many feet above street level. More than that, the walls are movable, so that the shape of a room may be changed at will; a kind of pneumatic floor prevents drafts from under the door; some variant of the photoelectric cell makes it possible for you to open a door by waving your hand at it; into the hollow mast you deposit your laundry and an invisible, inaudable machine, which is part of the house, washes the clothes. And if you do not like your neighbors, you call up the service company and move.

Most of these new ideas for housing are built on the assumption that there will come a new relation between city and country. Mr. Ford, hoping to have men at work six months in the fields and six in the factory, does not intend to bring farmers from New Hampshire down to the mills at Lawrence; the factory will move nearer the farm and the glut of population will be relieved.

An Old Masterpiece

Out in Connecticut I know a house which was built, about two hundred years ago, without the aid of carpenters; the builder-owner was a cabinet maker and every board was fitted with the exquisite care of a craftsman. The carving over the doors, the proportions of the windows, even the beams in the cellar, all have beauty. Part of the beauty, in our eyes, comes from the relief after seeing fake-Spanish, fake-English, fake-Breton cottages all over the American landscape. The cabinet-maker's house was not an imitation, it was his own variation of the type of house natural and customary at the time.

The factory-built house is in keeping with the rest of our lives. The other things nearest to us, our clothes and our food, are also factory made, and with a good deal of skill and satisfaction. If the mechanical house is as good as the machine made suit and the machine made ham, it will be far from contemptible.

"Mother's simply divine! Why, she's nearly sixty and yet she has the mentality of a woman of twenty!"

Sherriff

—By Michael Joseph—

WHEN BOB SHERRIFF asked me to read the manuscript of his first novel, I admit I had considerable misgiving. After the world-wide success of "Journey's End" it seemed to be taken for granted that the author would fade rapidly into obscurity.

His second play, "Badger's Green," was a quiet comedy about a village cricket team. When produced in England, it had the failure widely predicted for it beforehand by those who know how readily the critics will turn from almost hysterical praise to acid condemnation of a successful author's next production.

They laughed at Sherriff when he admitted he hadn't seen "Hamlet," but meant to when he had time. The failure of "Badger's Green" was inevitable and Sherriff immediately was branded as a "oncer."

Even plays like "Journey's End" are soon forgotten nowadays. Sherriff made a fortune out of it, but money does not mean very much to him.

Sherriff has been quietly working away at this novel, which he always planned to write.

Well, there is a surprise in store for the critics. His novel is not yet finished, but there is no mistaking the quality of it. Entitled "The Fortnight in September," it is the simple, leisurely chronicle of a bourgeois family—Mr. Stevens and his faded wife, Flossie; his daughter, Mary, and his sons, Dick and Ernie—who set out on their annual pilgrimage to the seaside. It is not dramatic, nothing much happens—at least, in the first half of the story, which I have read.

Maybe Sherriff has something up his sleeve, although I hope not, for the small beer of domestic routine and the interplay of family relationships are most satisfying entertainment. Every now and then something flashes at you from the page; some trifling phrase or incident which touches a forgotten chord in your own experience.

Only two or three people—Miss G. B. Stern, with whom Sherriff has been staying, is one of them—have seen the typescript. It has already begun to blaze a trail of enthusiasm, and I shall be astonished if the book does not provide a sensational comeback for the author of "Journey's End." I do not think it an exaggeration to say that Arnold Bennett in his best form might have written it.

After Pershing, Joffre. From Paris there is news of the Marechale's decision to release for world publication the posthumous memoirs of the great French soldier. The memoirs, which contain nearly a quarter of a million words, cover the period up to 1916, when Joffre relinquished his command.

Publication may coincide with that of the official life of the late Lord Oxford and Asquith, which is nearing completion. This is the joint work of J. A. Spender and Cyril Asquith, a younger son of the man who was Prime Minister of Great Britain during the first years of the war.

In his own writings, Lord Oxford was singularly reticent about himself, and I hear that the "lifer" will shed new light on his early days as Mr. Asquith, before and after his marriage to Margot Tennant.

The wife of a Prime Minister, curiously enough, is the chief character in Miss V. Sackville-West's new novel, "All Passion Spent," which has just been published in England. It is being much talked about. Another outstanding success is A. J. Cronin's "Hatter's Castle," which Hugh Walpole considers the best first novel since the war.

This book is the current choice of the English Book Society. The author, who is a young doctor, now has a play ready for production.

Interesting

—By Bruno Lessing—

PARIS—WHEN ONE READS European dispatches in American newspapers, one gets the impression that all the people of Europe are interested in nothing but international relations, war debts, the League of Nations, bolshevism and a lot of other highbrow junk. I've been to half a dozen typically French parties recently—family affairs, social gatherings, anniversaries and all that sort of thing—and here are the subjects that were most popular:

A young man who was in love with a girl shot his rival. The girl, switching her affections, insisted that she had done the shooting herself in order to shield the young man who had been arrested. Both insisted that they had committed the crime. Newspaper circulation increased and women readers just adored the stuff.

A little tot in the south of France pushed her doll's carriage across the road. Suddenly discovering that the doll had fallen out, she ran back to the middle of the road just as a big touring car came rushing along. It was a pathetic tragedy. Many tears came to many eyes as the story was retold. A little girl and her doll!

"How brutal it was of the French government to forbid Texas Guinan and her lassies to land! The government is going too far! Beware! We would have liked to see those girls."

"They say that King Carol is going to expel his wife from Rumania in order to take up with his old sweetheart again." (Here, of course, male and female critics are not in entire accord.)

"Have you seen City Lights? It isn't as good and as fresh as the old Chaplin pictures, is it? Do you think so? Oh, maybe. But I went to see 'The Kid' four times. I just like to laugh."

"Isn't it funny about that American mayor who wouldn't take a drink? But all Americans aren't like that. I know some who drink."

So I've come to the conclusion that people are pretty much alike everywhere. A war, of course, stirs them up and makes them conscious of their nationality. Which diverts their minds into unnatural channels. But when they're entirely normal, people are about the same in Paris, New York, London, Shanghai and Galveston, Texas.

I did find, at one cocktail party, two old geezers with whiskers, sitting in a corner, each with a hand cupped to his ear, whispering raucously to each other about the iniquities of war debts. But you find those same birds everywhere and no one pays any attention to them.

In rhetoric a euphemism is supposed to be a figure of speech whereby a mild name conveys a disagreeable idea. In Paris the phrase, "cocktail party," is frequently the absolute reverse.

Inasmuch as you can get a cocktail here anywhere, in public, there's no particular thrill attendant upon a cocktail party. You might just as well invite your friends to a malted-milk party. But American residents, in rebellion against prohibition, have introduced, advertised, flaunted and established the phrase as an innovation in the social code. And everybody is giving cocktail parties.

Well, the other day I received an engraved invitation to a cocktail party from a very nice, elderly French lady. There were nearly 100 people at the party and all were delighted with the musical program which the hostess had provided. Tea was served and madeira and sherry and Tokay wines. But, no cocktails. Some one asked the old lady where the cocktail idea came in. She shrugged her shoulders.

"It is just a phrase," she said. "We must keep up to date."

Apropos American residents in Paris: A visitor was invited to a luncheon of the American Club. He carefully surveyed the prosperous, bored-looking gathering and asked his host:

"What sort of guys are they?"

"Oh, they're mostly retired American business men" was the answer.

The guest grinned. "Retired?" he asked. "Or withdrawn?"

I just know of the incident by hearsay. I've been wondering whether there's a fine distinction involved or whether it's just a nasty crack.

God, Give Her Sun on Saturday

Consider, Lord, our clerk,
In glorious array
She came this morn to work—
O precious Saturday!
But now, these thunder-clouds
Put her gay hopes in shrouds!
See, at the window-pane
She frowns with Lois and Jane.
French bonnet, chiffon gown—
How can the weather frown?
How may she range a Jersey wood
Or heed an ocean mood,
Or tour today and Sunday
(Racing with flying hours
To reach her desk by Monday)?
The rain has changed to mist—
Ere Jerry calls at one
There is still time for sun.
Lord, favor a girl's tryst;
'Tis but one day in seven—
Cloud not, cloud not her heaven!

GRAND HOTEL

VICKI BAUM'S SENSATIONAL STORY OF TWO CONTINENTS

Grusinskaya Denied Encore as Curtain Falls With Slight Applause

SYNOPSIS

In the atmosphere peculiar to all great hotels, three guests and several hotel employes are brought briefly to view. These guests include a morose and hideously scarred ex-army surgeon, Herr Dokter Otternschlag, Grusinskaya, once famous but now aging ballet dancer, and Baron Gaigern, ex-soldier, handsome, athletic and mysterious. The hall porter distrusts the Baron. The house detective admits that this likable young man will bear watching. Otto Kringelein, bookkeeper, of Saxony, has just succeeded in getting a room after many rebuffs. His uncouth attire causes smiles in the lounge.

KRINGELEIN continued his letter writing, telling Herr Kampmaniin, his Fredersdorf attorney, that he was using his inheritance of his father to consult a specialist, who was of the opinion he did not have long to live, and that he was going to a sanitarium.

Kringelein read the letters through. He had composed them during the course of two sleepless nights. He was not quite satisfied. It seemed to him that something essential was left unsaid in the one to the solicitor, but he could not find out where the omission lay. Kringelein, though he was of a diffident and modest nature, was not actually stupid.

He had idealism and aspirations. For example, he called himself "moribundis" as a joke and this expression was one he had encountered in a book from the lending library, which he had read with some trouble and often discussed with the solicitor. Kringelein had lived from childhood the ordinary life of a small provincial town, the rather dreary, uninspired, and pointless life of a petty clerk. Early in life and without any strong impulse he had married Fraulein Anna Sauerkatz, the daughter of Sauerkatz, the grocer. During the time between their engagement and marriage she seemed to him attractive, but very soon after the marriage he found her hateful.

SHE WAS PARSIMONIOUS

She was disagreeable and parsimonious and obsessed by petty cares. Kringelein had a fixed salary with a small rise every five years, and, as his health was not robust, his wife and her family pinned him from the first day to a rigid economy in the vague prospect of his becoming a charge on them later on. For example, he had to sell his little dog, Zipfel, as soon as a tax was put upon dogs. He always had a sore place on his neck from the frayed edges of the old collars he was forced to wear. Now and then it occurred to him that something was not quite right with his life, but what it was he did not know.

Often at the meetings of the musical society, when the high tremolo of his tenor voice climbed above the other voices, he had a soaring, blissful feeling as though he himself escaped on wings. Often in the evening he went out along the road to Mickenau, and then leaving the road and climbing across the wet ditches, he wandered into the country along the balks dividing field from field. There was a soft murmur between the stalks of the corn and when the ears stroked his hand he felt a strange pleasure.

He had also had some remarkable and happy experiences under chloroform in the hospital, though he had forgotten them. It was only in little things that Otto Kringlein, the bookkeeper, differed from his fellows. But these little things, combined perhaps with the bewildering dose of death in his veins, had brought this "moribundus" to Berlin's most expensive hotel, and set him down before those sheets of notepaper to which he had confided his strange resolve and its pitiful causes.

SHOCKED AT DOCTOR

Kringelein rose rather unsteadily to his feet and as he went with his three letters through the reading room he met Dr. Otternschlag. He had a violent shock when he found the mangled side of the doctor's face turned inquiringly towards him.

"Well? Settled down?" Otternschlag asked listlessly. He wore a dinner jacket and looked down at the toes of his patent-leather shoes.

"Yes, just about. First class," Kringelein answered with embarrassment. "Thanks. Indeed it is you I have to thank, sir. You were so extremely kind——"

"Kind? I? Not at all. Oh, about the room? Not a bit. Y'see, I've been wanting to move on for a long time, only I'm too lazy. Miserable joint, this hotel. If you'd taken my room, I'd been on the train now bound for Milan or somewhere. Been very nice. Well, it really doesn't make any difference. Nasty weather everywhere in March. Same wherever you stick it out. May just as well stay here."

"You travel a great deal, sir, no doubt?" Kringelein asked shyly. He was ready to attribute immense wealth or high birth to every visitor in the hotel. He made a bow of the utmost Fredersdorfian elegance as he went on to say timidly: "Allow me to introduce myself — Kringelein. You have seen a lot of the world, sir?"

Otternschlag turned aside the "souvenir from Flanders."

"Oh, pretty much," he said. "Been everywhere every one else goes—India and a few places besides." He smiled faintly at the inordinate hunger for such experiences that shone in the blue glint behind Kringelein's glasses.

WONDERFUL TO TRAVEL

"It is my intention to travel, too," said Kringelein. "The head of our firm, Preysing, for example, goes abroad every year. A short time ago he was at St. Moritz. Last Easter he took his whole family to Capri. That sort of thing must be wonderful."

"Have you any family?" asked Dr. Otternschlag, laying aside his paper. Kringelein took five seconds to consider the matter and then replied:

"No."

"No," returned Otternschlag, and in his mouth the word had something irrevocable about it.

"First I should like to go to Paris," said Kringelein. "Paris must be a beautiful city?"

Dr. Otternschlag, who upto now had shown a glimmer of warmth and interest, seemed to be falling asleep. He frequently had such moments of enervation in the cours of the day, and the only resource he had against them was of a secret and vicious kind.

"You must go to Paris in May." he murmured.

"I shan't have time for that," Kringelein said quickly.

Dr. Otternschlag got up abruptly and left him. "I'm going to my room to lie down a bit," he said, more to himself than to Kringelein, who was left standing with his three letters in the reading room. The newspaper that Otternschlag had been glancing through fell to the floor. It was pencilled over with scribbles of little men and over each little man was a thick cross. Kringelein, slightly abashed, left the reading room too, and timidly went in search of the dining room. Sounds of music issued from it, insistent though subdued, and the alternating drag and beat echoed all through the big hotel.

CURTAIN CAME DOWN

The curtain came down. It met the stage with a dull thud of heavy iron. Grusinskaya, who but a moment before circled as light as a flower among her troupe of girls, crept panting into the nearest wing. Utterly dazed, she grasped the brawny arm of a scene shifter. Her hand shook and she gasped for breath like a wounded animal. Sweat ran along the wrinkles below her eyes.

The clapping made no more noise than distant rain and then it came suddenly near—a sign that the curtain had gone up. A man in the wings opposite was laboriously winding it up with great swings of the crank handle. Grusinskaya adjusted her smile like a cardboard mask and danced forward to make her curtsey before the footlights.

Gaigern, whose boredom had been immeasurable, clapped feebly three times merely from good nature and left his seat, well in front, for one of the crowded exits. In the front rows and in the gallery a few stalwarts shouted and clapped. Father back there was a general stampede for the cloakrooms.

To Grusinskaya on the stage it looked like a rout, a panic. All the white shirt fronts and dress-coated backs and theater cloaks streamed on in the one direction. She smiled. She threw up her head on her long thin neck. She made a skip to the right and then to the left. She flung out her arms in greeting to the public that was now in full retreat. The curtain came down, rose again.

The ballet stood its ground rigidly posed and disciplined.

"Curtain! Curtain up!" shouted Pimenov, the ballet master, hysterically. He took charge of the curtain. Slowly it went up while the man at the crank worked like mad. One or two people in the front, who were just leaving, stopped and turned around, smiling vacantly and clapping. There was some applause too from a box.

NO ENCORE

Grusinskaya pointed to the girls in gauze, who were grouped around her. Modestly she diverted the meager applause from herself to these unimportant young creatures. And now a few more came back with their coats and cloaks on and surveyed the scene with an air of amusement.

Witte, the old German conductor, down below in the orchestra, was exerting his authority with frantic gestures—for the musicians were already packing up.

"No one is to go, he whispered nervously. He too was trembling and perspiring. "No one is to go, gentlemen, please. Perhaps the Spring Waltz will have to be repeated."

"No fear," said a bassoon. "No encores today. Finished for today. There, what did I say?"

In truth the applause died down. Grusinskaya caught sight of the laughing musician's cavernous black mouth just as the curtain, seperated her from the house. The applause abruptly terminated and the sudden silence on the other side of the curtain gaped ominously. In the silence the tips of the ballet girls' silk shoes could be heard scrapping the stage.

"May we go off?" whispered Lucille Lafitte, the premiere danseuse, in French, to Grusinskaya's trembling powdered back.

"Yes, off Everyone off. Go to the devil!" Grusinskaya answered in Russian. She ment to shout it, but it died in her throat like a sob. All the gauze rustled off in fright. The footlights went out and Grusinskaya stood alone for a moment on the stage freezing in the gray light as though at a rehearsal.

Grusinskaya begins to hate having old people around her. She compares the present failure on the stage to her former triumphs. Read tomorrow's instalment for further developments in this entrancing novel.

WINE DRINKING IN U.S. CHEERED

Paris, June 29 (INS)—"Come on in—the wine is fine."

This invitation is flung across the ocean to the United States by the 12th annual congress of the International League of Adversaries of Prohibition.

Count Bertrand de Mun, president of the export commission for French wines, asserted the per capita consumption of his country is 150 quarts annually.

A report on "failure of prohibition in the United States," especially one part showing increased consumption of wine, was received with cheers.

Wife Finds Suicide

Ludlow, June 29 (AP)—Dmytro Kurtyj, 42, for many years a storekeeper here, committed suicide in his store today by shooting. His body was found by his wife.

Do You Know

That you can have an extra telephone in your kitchen, sun-porch or bed room, connected to your present line, at a charge of about three cents a day?

It would save going up and down stairs when the telephone bell rings, avoid the nuisance of long cords, and would also afford protection in emergencies.

CLARA BOW AND REX BELL LIKELY TO BE STARRED IN "VANITIES"

Hollywood Hears Rumor Estelle Taylor May Be Prima Donna

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, June 29—Clara Bow's first professional appearance since her illness may be in the Earl Carroll "Vanities" this fall. Nor is this a wild rumor concocted in desperation by me. The spectacular carrot-top is at this moment in possession of a contract put in her hands by agents of the Broadway producer. Whether or not she will sign it depends chiefly on Rex Bell.

Harriet Parsons

Clara is willing and even eager to sign, provided Rex will accompany and appear with her. Rex wants Clara to get away from the "It" girl type of stuff, and he isn't at all sure the Carroll show will fit in with this idea. However, his most absorbing interest next to Clara is his Nevada ranch. He won't turn down any feasible opportunity to make some money to put into that ranch. Hence the chances are if Carroll makes the likeable cowboy actor a generous enough offer he'll get both Rex and Clara for the coming "Vanities." Quite a feather in Mr. Carroll's cap if he pulls it off.

An underground whisper, which also concerns the "Vanities," has it that Estelle Taylor will be the prima donna in the Carroll show. Estelle's been taking singing lessons for some time.

Robert Montgomery to Do College Story

Word that Robert Montgomery is to do a college story by Francis Wallace, titled "Huddle," should bring forth reminiscent sighs from the personable M-G-M star's horde of adorers. This is Bob's first collegiate yarn since "So This Is College," which introduced him to movie fans. And how the boy has progressed since then! No doubt about it—Bob rates the 1930-31 medal for ladder climbing. His work in "Strangers May Kiss," "Shipmates" and other recent talkies has brought him a following which no actor in pictures can top. I've been a Montgomery fan myself since I saw him in "Untamed," one of his first.

At the moment Columbia is not only the gem of the ocean but the gem of Hollywood, as far as I'm concerned. With all the major studios slowing down to snail's pace, due to general conditions, plucky little Columbia is forging ahead full blast. Harry Cohn expects to have six pictures in production shortly. He's signed Directors Roland V. Lee and Edward Sedgwick. The former will megaphone "The Guilty Generation" and the latter leaves M-G-M, after seven years, to put Jack Holt and Ralph Graves through their paces in an untitled newspaper yarn by Howard Green. Cohn has also purchased "Men of Her Life," by Warner (Flaming Youth) Fabian. And there's a story, as yet untitled, set for Buck Jones.

Roland Young Heads Cast

"Annabelle's Affairs," at the Modern and Beacon, is a pip for fun. It is of course the screen version of that Claire Kummer stage vehicle of mirth, "Good Gracious Annabelle"; and on the silver sheet it hums along merrily, also, giving its generally excellent cast plenty of chance to effervesce.

Roland Young, for acting, is a name to conjure with, and he has much to do in the plot. Victor McLaglen is also present; among others, the scintillatingly beautiful Jeanette MacDonald.

We commend "Annabelle's Affairs" for pure amusement. We liked it, and our guess is that you will, too. H. S.

Excellent Stage Show and Gala Film Fare on RKO Boston Bill

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

An entertaining movie and a good vaudeville bill give zest to a visit to the RKO Keith-Boston this week. The film is "Three Who Loved," and it happens to be better than its title. For it has the good fortune to possess the elements of mystery and suspense, not to speak of the teeming love of Betty Compson for her two men, Conrad Nagel and Robert Ames.

The bewitching Miss Compson is a Swedish girl newly come across to wed Mr. Nagel. The latter is secretly a gambler. One motive is that he may get money to buy luxuries for his sweetie. In a pinch Mr. Nagel steals and throws the blame on his pal, Mr. Ames, who has taken to playing the courtier to the fair Betty himself. When the innocent chap is sent to prison, Mr. Nagel finds the way clear, and he and Miss Betty marry. It turns out that his conscience—he does have one—bothers him, so he makes up his mind to confess. Mr. Ames meets an accidental death—and thereafter events shape their course toward the inevitable happiness at the end of the trail, even if Mr. Nagel has to "do time" for his sins.

Harold C. Wright

Mr. Nagel handles his dialogue very well, and in fact the three principals are quite convincing. George Archainbaud has done a fair job in the direction, and in one sequence uses child actors to good advantage.

But the stage show is classier. It has balance and merit. For instance, there are the delightful four from the Roxy aggregation, known to radio fans; and this quartette sings excellently. They are Dorothy Githens, Adelaide De Loca, Harold Clyde Wright and John Griffin.

An excellent act also is that of Thelma White and Roscoe Ails, the comedian. They term it "Steps and Riddles," and it is a melange of fine dancing and great fun. Other nice turns are added by Lytell and Fant, by the Five Jewels, clever jugglers, and by the Briants in their mirthful "Dream of a Moving Man."

The Cast

Helga	Betty Compson
John	Conrad Nagel
Phil	Robert Ames
Rooney	Robert Keane
Annie	Bodil Rosing
Sonny	Dickie Moore

Moore Sails to Make Film

Emmet Moore, famous Irish minstrel and Erin's ambassador of good will on both stage and screen, was given a send-off by a host of friends as he sailed away on the Laconia from East Boston, to make his next film in Ireland, and to begin work in connection with the Free State's worldwide campaign for publicity in 1932.

Because of his work in having through many theatrical seasons, carried the spirit and message of the Emerald Isle to far countries, Mr. Moore is a big part of the program for "Ireland 1932." Great events are being planned for Dublin and other cites, and government and civic bodies are banded to put Ireland before the world as a tourist magnet next year.

Mr. Moore outlined plans he has for his next motion picture; he aims to make it breathe the spirit of Ireland, its romance, its scenery, its charms of people and their history.

"The Good Bad Girl" Tops Bowdoin Bill

At the Bowdoin Square is being shown "The Good Bad Girl."

Another picture is Bob Steele in "Headin' North." The vaudeville presents Marie Corelli & Co., the Six Hollywood Girls, Aloma Hawaiians, Al and Stryker, talkers, and acrobats, Frankie Ross, master of ceremonies, Day and Wheeler, and Marietta Sisters. On Friday night returns of the Schmeling-Stribling bout will be announced.

New Star on Fine Arts Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

Gangway, please, while we lead forward a most alluring sample of sex appeal for introduction to American movie fans! Folks, meet Madeleine Carroll—Miss Carroll, meet all these regular folk! Now, get acquainted. It's a question whether the British lady will like us, but we're sure we're going to like her—immensely. For in "The School for Scandal," English talkie at the Fine Arts, she is so revelatory that—well, the merest breath of air, properly directed in that Marlene Dietrich sequence of hers, would have been disturbing and upsetting, to say the least. And such grace and charm has she, that one visions her as a composite of Loretta Young and Jeanette MacDonald, physically, plus acting ability. In Hollywood, they'd go wild over her.

The comedy presented is, of course, the old classic, excellently acted, by people who know how to read their lines as they pantomime. Not having seen the Sheridan play in a long time, we enjoyed it the more; its humor is still gay and contagious after all its 200 years or so.

Basil Gill is a finished Sir Peter. Ian Fleming and Henry Hewitt are the Surface brothers, Joseph and Charles; they and Edgar Bruce as Sir Oliver, are real performers. Yet better even is Hector Abbas, as Moses, reminiscent of George Arliss, somehow, and worthy of being starred in his own right. Even the butler, name unknown, is exquisitely done.

As for Miss Carroll, she's worth meeting. Here's hoping she comes to town more frequently from overseas.

The Cast

Lady Teazle	Madeleine Carroll
Sir Harry	Hayden Coffin
Joseph Surface	Ian Fleming
Charles Surface	Henry Hewitt
Sir Oliver	Edgar K. Bruce
Maria	Dodo Watts
Lady Sneerwell	Anne Grey

"IF YOU SEND HER AWAY—I am going with her!"

A savage little beauty who threw herself into his arms and told him that she loved him—quite unlike the cool formality of the girl to whom he was engaged. No wonder his pulse pounded through his veins as love said, "come to the South Seas!"

Here is impetuous youth throwing to the winds every heritage of family tradition, business achievement and the ties of a select social set to follow the call of love to the South Seas. A mad, primitive love that blinded him to the plea of a father who knew that "East is East and West is West!"

THIS IS LIFE

ARE YOU GETTING YOUR TWO BOOKS A YEAR FROM A LIBRARY?

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

AMERICA HAS BECOME so accustomed to great national conferences, covering the entire country, representing hundreds of thousands of people and hundreds of millions of dollars, that the newspapers hardly bother any more to report them adequately, particularly if they are not concerned with business. Last week two great conferences took place in New England, and it was interesting to see how differently they fared in getting their story over to the people. The Credit Men's Association was well reported in the big city newspapers, both in New England and elsewhere. But the annual meeting of the American Library Association at New Haven went almost without comment.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

This is only another proof, if another were needed, that in spite of our characteristic American ballyhoo about education and literature and the arts, we are, when it comes down to cases, not as interested as we pretend to be in the non-material aspects of life. We are supposed to be tremendously proud of our free library system—the finest in the world—but we are not sufficiently interested in what it is doing and trying to do to ask for news of it. If we did ask, we should get the news.

A Library Will Help You

As I write I have just returned from New Haven and the 53d annual meeting of the American Library Association. It had come to the East for the first time in several years to inspect Yale's magnificent new library, made possible by the generosity of that same Harkness who gave Harvard her new houses. Some 2500 men and women from all parts of the United States flooded the dormitories and meeting places on the Yale campus for a week, while they attended some 90 separate section meetings, round-table conferences, large assemblies, luncheon and dinner conferences and the like. At times there were as many as a dozen important meetings going on simultaneously, and this over a period of six days with three sessions a day.

Such were the activities of an association barely half a century old, yet now one of the most important forces that America owns for public education and culture. Even the briefest recapitulation of the various sections of this monster conference will show the far-reaching effect of the work of our librarians.

I do not intend to let this conference pass without a discussion of some of the most important questions I heard raised in New Haven. Later in the week I intend to write about an important change that is taking place in the minds of librarians everywhere in respect to their responsibility toward the public that uses library books. But for today, let me show simply that there is hardly any interest that an intelligent American may have which may not be informed and strengthened by the contributions the libraries can make to it.

Do you know, by any chance, how many different kinds of libraries there are? You'd be surprised! Probably I do not know them all, but the following are some of those discussed at New Haven. There are Law libraries, Agricultural libraries, State libraries, County libraries, Business libraries, College libraries, High School and Junior High School libraries, Hospital libraries, Prison and other institution libraries, Seamen's libraries, Extension libraries operating by automobile trucks in country districts and even in the congested districts of big cities. There are special libraries for little children, for the blind and for our foreign-born citizens. There is hardly a kind of person or variety of interest that is not being looked out for by some special organization or department of the great parent of them all, the free circulating public library.

Borrow Two, Buy Two

And yet with all this activity, this enormous personnel of trained workers, this huge sum expended from taxation and from private generosity, we are told by R. L. Duffus in his interesting little book called "Books" that the average American takes out only two library books per year. In addition, he buys two and he borrows two. (The chances are, also, that he forgets to return the two he has borrowed, hence the newly coined word "book-sneaf" for the careless friend who thinks that a book is like an umbrella, something to be laid up for a rainy day.)

In Massachusetts, of course, there are few villages so small as not to possess a public library, but there are large tracts in the South and West where the public conscience is even less awake to the necessity of books than it is to the necessity of schools, and where it looks as if the federal government will have to step in and help those communities that are either incapable of helping themselves or too little interested. And that means, as we perfectly well understand here in Massachusetts, that more Massachusetts money will have to go to help the United States government help our backward neighbors. Already our wealthy and progressive Eastern states are bearing heavy burdens to help supply the less civilized parts of the country with good roads, good schools and the like. So we might as well spend a little more and help give them some good books.

Literacy and Achievement

For it is not accidental that the wealthiest and most progressive parts of our country are those where the public libraries are most thickly scattered. Literacy and achievement always go hand in hand, just as there seems to be a definite relationship between the amount of schooling a person has and his liability to a criminal record.

All over the United States the old-fashioned amateur librarian, usually an elderly lady with little training, is being replaced by young men and women of good, general education, and of special technical training as well. With the coming of these new professional people, the library is ceasing to be merely a place where story books are circulated. Technical libraries in every field of industry and science are being collected. The business man of today who does not use the reference books available in his field is in the same unfortunate position as the industrialist, according to Arthur D. Little, who is not interested in research. He is apt to find himself left behind in the march of progress.

Get the library habit! It is better than most habits you are likely to have.

FLARED HAT MEANS GENTILITY IN BOSTON

Boston Has an Individual Style on Headdress—So Has G. B. Shaw

Mayor Curley, like good politicians, wears all kinds of hats. Summer finds straws, hard or soft; winter, a derby. But all soft hats have the brims up. Just like Shaw.

Henry I. Harriman wouldn't wear his panama hat with the brim any other way than up. Here he is with the brim in true dignified fashion. He has Shaw idea.

George Bernard Shaw, writer, and now "style expert," shows how he matches his hat-brim with his mustache and his eyebrows—turned up. "Only way," he says.

Governor Ely, in either panama or felt, can be found with one side of the brim up and the other down. Not a compromise, it's stylish that way, and he likes it.

Edward A. Filene is in Europe and could not be reached, but this photo of him shows that the brim is worn up most of the time. Dignity personified, we'd say.

KEEP SWING OF MUSTACHE, IF YOU HAVE ONE

Inquiring Reporter Gets Good Line on Style, Then Meets Martin Lomasney

By THE INQUIRING REPORTER

There are hats and hats, but somehow or other the position of the brim of the hat makes the man.

This opinion, expressed by a large business house in London, came in the form of an order for all employes to wear their hat brims turned up to present a more businesslike appearance, according to news dispatches today.

George Bernard Shaw, writer and philosopher, immediately stepped into the discussion and announced himself as a style expert.

"I always wear my hat brim to match my eyebrows and mustache—turned up."

BRIMS UP—FIRST SHOWING.

Armed with this information, the Inquiring Reporter of the Boston Evening American started out to investigate.

He found that the majority of Bostonians agree with Shaw and the London business firm and wear their brims up.

Such comments as "Only way to wear a hat to be dignified," and "Wouldn't be seen any other way when I wear a soft hat," were received from the majority of the persons interviewed.

LIEUT.-GOV. WM. S. YOUNGMAN—"I wear the brim of my leghorn hat always turned up. It presents a much more dignified appearance to a man, and I wouldn't think of wearing it in any other manner."

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY—"When I don a soft hat, either in summer or winter, the brim is always turned up. It's the only way to wear a hat of the soft variety, according to my opinion. There may be those who think otherwise, but I don't agree with them. Most of the time, however, I wear a good, old derby."

JAMES J. PHELAN of Hornblower & Weeks—"A derby hat is my preference in the winter,

HUGHES HELD IN BURGLARY

Charles Hughes, whose wife took her own life "to teach him a lesson and make him a better man," was arraigned in Brookline court today, charged with attempting to break into an apartment house at 251 St. Paul st.

He was held in $1000 bail for a hearing tomorrow, as was William Frasier, arrested with him. Both pleaded not guilty.

Hughes' wife, Ethel, formerly an actress and a beauty prize winner, shot herself in their home on Westwood st., Dorchester, in March and died several days later at City Hospital. Hughes himself tried suicide last month, shooting himself in the abdomen. He gave his address as Tremont st., South End, as did Frasier. They were arrested at 10:20 last night by Patrolman Thomas J. Hourihan.

A compromising attitude is sometimes adopted by John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor. Brims may be up all the way, half up and half down. Either way becomes him.

Soft straws and felts worn by James J. Phelan, prominent Boston business man, have their brims turned up. Another advocate for the "Turned-up brim" league.

Perhaps to see the traffic situation the better, Joseph Conry wears a hard straw tipped up. Mr. Conry is so well dressed that perhaps he likes it.

"It's a silly idea, this fixing a hat style," says Martin Lomasney, political leader, shown here with the brim half and half. Who cares? Martin does not.

Patsy's Beer Has a Shooting "Kick"

Potent but too hearty was the batch of beer made by Patsy Suozzo of Shelby st., East Boston. Too hearty because he could drink only five of the 17 bottles he brewed for week-end consumption.

And potent because after the fifth he decided to shoot down the rest. He lined them up on a window sill and with a rifle knocked over 10 of the remaining 12. Today he was fined $25.

"Camera Eye" Lands 2 in Quincy Court

The "camera eye" of Patrolman Edward Cruise of Quincy brought the arrest of two Arabians today in that city as fugitives from justice from Detroit. The two men, booked as Hasse Esse and Mohammed Omar, were held in bonds of $3000 to await Detroit officers who charge them with larceny of $1400.

AIRPORT PLAN TO PASS TODAY

Predictions that Mayor Curley's request for $1,250,000 to level Governor's Island and link it with the airport will pass was made by several city councillors as they gathered for their weekly meeting today.

Fifteen votes are needed for passage of the loan order and it was reported that 16 were ready to vote for it. Councillor Robert G. Wilson, Jr., of Dorchester, being said to have given up his opposition to the expenditure.

Interest in the measure was heightened by a letter sent by City Councillor Laurence Curtis to State Commander Richard F. Paul of the American Legion in which he said while he wanted to see the Boston airport the best in the country, he considered the mayor's plan "half baked and the expenditure twice what it ought to be."

—The eight-weeks course in a beauty school, advertised today for $15 in the classified section, is an ample estimate for a quiet, loving man any woman seeking a pleasant and profitable vacation.

—A deep marcel wave with perfect ringlets at the ends for $2—are the words of another advertiser in his announcement today.

—Before starting your touring trip this summer read the tire announcement today which offers a tire for a dollar with each tire bought at the regular price.

PRISON AID ACT IS EXTENDED

An order directing that the prisoner's compensation act, passed in 1928, be put into effect immediately at the Concord reformatory, is expected to be issued Correction Commissioner A. Warren Stearns within the next few days.

Under the law, Concord reformatory, the state prison and the women's reformatory at Sherborn were named as the three places to benefit. Because the act contained the word "may" it was extended to the state prison only.

State Auditor Francis X. Hurley, in making an audit of the Concord institution, held that "may" was mandatory in the law when relating to duties of state officials.

SHOTS FLY IN 3-MILE CHASE

Following a three-mile chase Franklin M. Pike, 28, of Boston st., Lynn, was arrested by Patrolmen Edwin M. Rowe and William Jack of the Wakefield police early today in Main st., Wakefield.

He will be arraigned in Malden court today, charged with being drunk, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, carrying a loaded revolver without a permit, and refusing to stop on signal of a police officer.

Pike was visiting friends in Wakefield. The officers noticed him driving in a sig-zag manner and attempted to stop him. He refused, police say, and put on more speed.

Quincy Man Jailed for Four Robberies

Willis V. Ross, 30, of Hancock st., Quincy, was sentenced to a year in jail today for robberies in the homes of Earl C. Fowler of Whitman st., Weymouth; Edward Hunt of Broad st., Weymouth; the Monarch Market and a furniture store in Quincy.

Lynn to Clean Up Haven of Tramps

Judge Ralph W. Reeve today ordered Lynn police to seek the aid of Dist-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Essex County in ridding dumping grounds in the Broad st. section of vagrants.

The court's action followed the arraignment of four men charged with drunkenness. All were sentenced to the State Farm.

TAD'S 'DAFFYDILS' OFFER SMART CUE FOR AMATEUR CARTOONISTS TO FOLLOW

Here It Comes Now, Your First Real Comic Strip!

If you have practiced faithfully as far as we've gone in the Evening American drawing course, you are ready to begin on your first comic strip.

In our fourth lesson today, John T. Moynahan, head of the Boston American Art Department, shows you how to get "punch" into a comic strip.

By JOHN T. MOYNAHAN

We're all ready to begin with our first honest-to-goodness comic strip. First, cut a strip of your drawing paper 17 inches long and 5½ inches deep, then rule a one-inch margin all around it. Now we have a box 15 inches by 3½ inches.

Next, measure three inches in from your left hand margin and make a dot. Now three inches from that, and so on, until you have four dots. Pencil in lines up and down and finish it so that you have five little boxes all the same size, like those that frame, say Jiggs.

Of course you won't always use the same number of boxes in your strips, but five will do for today.

In the fourth lesson of the American Art Course, John T. Moynahan, head of the Boston Evening American art department, shows you how to get "punch" on your first attempt at a comic strip.

After you've practiced a little on today's lesson, try drawing your own strip, using any number you want.

Now we need characters for our strip. Let's use the "daffydils."

EASY TO DO

They're easy to draw and you can get a lot of expression into them if you try. The "daffydils" are a great example of how simple a character can be and still pack a tremendous wallop.

Now look at the first picture I have drawn for this lesson. You will notice that it sets the scene for us. We know that the "daffydils" are down on the farm, and we see that one "daffydil's" hen is scratching up the other fellow's garden.

You can see the owner of the garden doesn't like it a bit, either. See how much expression you can get by the way you draw the "daffydil's" arms and legs? He hasn't any face, but you can tell what he's thinking about.

Now in the second picture we have what the movies call a "close-up." There's trouble brewing between the "daffydils." Be careful of the lettering in your "balloons." "Balloons" are those clouds you put your characters' words in. I have purposely left in the guide lines for the lettering.

DAILY TRUE STORY

THE DEATH SHOT

ELSIE WAS 16 WHEN SHE MET LARSEN

THERE IS no telling exactly what passed through the mind of "Chunk" Larson just before he shot at Tom Cooper. But by fitting the pieces together it is possible to come pretty close to it and tell the whole story.

"Chunk" had been riding high for several years. Murderer and thief, his specialty was payroll holdups. Several times the police had tried to pin something on him but with no success because he usually killed his victims and dead men never identify their murderers.

He knew Detective-Sergeant Tom Cooper, and Cooper knew him. Both of them knew Elsie Lane. It was she who brought on their first clash.

Elsie was only a kid, sixteen or so, when she first met Larson. He had plenty of money and he fascinated her with his ability to spend it. But when she heard the whispers about the source of his money she cut him cold. Elsie was no gangster's moll. Nor did she want to be.

She met Tom Cooper a couple of years later and became engaged to him. When Larson heard about it he followed her on the street one night and reviled her. There is no other word for the language he used. Elsie came home in tears.

She didn't tell Tom. She was afraid to. She knew what he would do. He would use his fists on Larson, but Larson might use a gun.

But Larson thought she had told him and when Tom did nothing he believed that the detective was afraid to make a move. That's the way it stood when Larson and two others held up the office of the Imperial Manufacturing Company.

The holdup was in another town and during it a payroll guard was shot and killed. The bandits drove off in a car, speeded for several miles and then ditched their machine. The, got into another which was waiting for them. In the course of time the police would find the ditched car, probably a few hours later. But by then they expected to be far away and driving another machine, one which could not possibly be identified by witnesses of the holdup and murder.

When they got back to town Larson let his two companions out of the machine, took the wheel and drove to his own home, where he parked it. He went into the house.

It was two hours later, just about dusk, when Tom Cooper came along. News of the payroll robbery and its attendant murder had been flashed to several cities near its scene and Tom knew about it. He was also certain that Larson had had a hand in it. As he passed Larson's car he looked at it carefully, then glanced at Larson's home. For a moment he paused, then started up the steps.

Then It Happened
Larson Spoke First

At this point there is a gap that will have to be filled in by surmise. This much, however, is certain. Larson must have been looking from the window because he saw Tom coming. That he saw him is proved by the fact that he met him at the door.

What Larson was thinking about nobody can tell. It may be that he thought Tom was finally calling for a showdown on his unpardonable insult to Elsie. Or it may be that he feared the police in some way had traced the second car to his home. From what happened it is more likely that he was thinking of the second possibility, even though the way in which the switch in machines had been worked left little probability that the police could trace the second one or even remotely connect it with the holdup and murder.

This, then, was the setting. It was dusk and the street lights had just come on. Tom was standing on the fourth step of a flight of six that led to the front door. Larson had just thrown open the door and stood in the doorway.

Behind him a light burned in the hallway. He stood shadowed plainly against it.

As Larson opened the door Tom had stopped his ascent. His hands hung naturally at his sides and at the moment he didn't notice that Larson had one of his thrust into a pocket of his coat.

Then it happened. And the irony of it is that Larson, who was long overdue on a score of other counts, will never know why.

It was Larson who spoke first, almost a growl.

"What d'ya want?" he demanded. Both his manner and tone were threatening.

Even then Tom didn't change his position. His hands still hung at his sides as he looked up at the man standing above him.

"Is that your car?" he asked.

As he spoke he turned to point to the machine at the curb.

Larson's answer was a roaring streak of red that came at the same instant that he jerked his hand from his pocket. The bullet clipped a sliver from the brim of Tom's hat.

There was no man in the police department who could draw a pistol quicker than Tom Cooper. Lawson didn't have a chance to fire a second shot. Two bullets smashed through his heart and he dropped.

They found the stolen money in his house, some of it still in the pay envelopes. Tom got a promotion for "solving" that case and saving the state the trouble of trying and executing Larson.

And only a few people know why he really went up the steps of Larson's home.

It was to tell Larson that he had parked his car near a fire plug and order him to move it.

"All names of characters in this story are fictitious."

LYNN HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE SECRET BRIDE

CUPID'S SECRET IS OUT

Mrs. Alvin Gosselin, who was graduated from Lynn English high school last week as Mildred Coates, her maiden name. Today she revealed to her mother that she was wed to Gosselin last November following a football game romance. (Sanborn Studio photo.)

WED LAST FALL, SHE CONFESSES TO MOTHER

18-Year-Old Mildred Coates Revealed a Romance That Started at Football Game

Mildred Coates, 18, Lynn high school graduate of a week ago, was very inquisitive today about housekeeping.

Mrs. Lawrence M. Coates, her mother and chief confidante, became curious and finally discovered her daughter was a secret bride.

Under a rigid line of maternal questions, the girl admitted she was married last November in Saugus to Alvin Gosselin, 23, an employe of Lynn in the water department, after a romance that started at a football game.

Since the wedding Miss Coates made her home with her mother and father at 74 Collins st., and Gosselin remained "single" at his parents' home, 19 Wells pl., both in Lynn.

RECORD STILL IS SEIZED

The largest distilling plant ever seized by Lawrence police was dismantled today when members of the liquor squad raided a two-story tenement in Woodland ct. and found a 300-gallon still in operation.

Frank Brocato, lone occupant of the building, was arrested. Other arrests are expected.

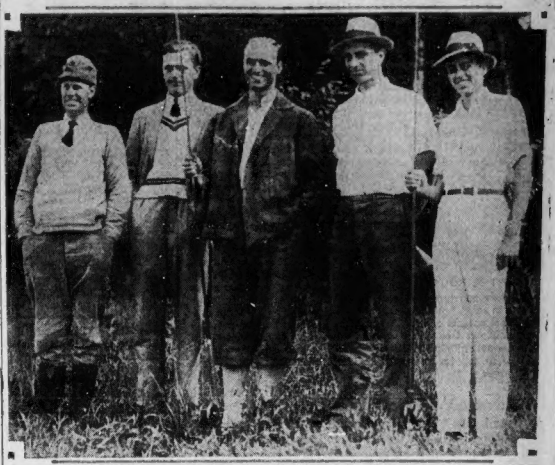

Complaints were received at police headquarters a week ago and the place had been under investigation.

Condensers ran from the basement boiler through the first and second floors to the roof. In addition to the still 10 300-gallon wooden vats containing grain and sugar were seized.

Subway Rider Robbed

James D. McKinnon of 146 Pine st., South Weymouth, was jostled in the Massachusetts ave. subway station by a pickpocket and robbed of his wallet containing $95.

Members of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's family are enjoying themselves on a fishing trip near Fredericton, N. B. This picture was taken on the shores of Harte's Island, pool, where the salmon fishing is excellent. In the party are C. B. Dall of New York, son-in-law of Gov. Roosevelt; Phillip Archer Shea, son of Maj. Archer Shea, ex-M. P. of the British House of Commons; James Roosevelt of Cambridge, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and John

CLUBWOMAN IS HELD FOR THEFT

Mrs. Goldie Gold, 49, mother of four children, of Harrison ave., was arrested today for larceny of funds of the Sorin Club of Dorchester, of which she has been treasurer 18 years.

According to Inspector Thomas Joyce, Mrs. Gold, whose husband is unemployed, converted the funds to her own use.

In Municipal Court she pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 for a hearing July 7.

The complaints were brought by two of the 25 club members of the club, which is a social organization of women. According to Inspector Joyce the larcenies were discovered when an audit showed the funds of the club had dwindled from $4000 to $2400.

BOSTON POLICE SHOOT VICTORS

Patrolmen William T. Desmond and Edward H. Vail of the Boston police, the two best shots in the department, returned today from Hartford, Ct., with a collection of prizes won in the Connecticut state police championship.

Desmond won three out of five matches and finished third in two others, while Vail's marksmanship was only a little less brilliant. They were ineligible for the championship award, which accordingly went to E. J. Langrish, of Hartford.

RUM COLLUSION UNDER PROBE

Alleged collusion between prohibition agents and members of a bootleg ring, said to be operating in the Merrimack Valley section, will be investigated by the federal grand jury, it was reported today at the federal building.

Representatives of U. S. Dist. Atty. Frederic H. Tarr are said to have been for some time looking into conditions there, notably in and around Lowell, Haverhill, Newburyport and Salisbury Beach.

Individuals connected with the Government service, while refusing to comment publicly, were known to be discussing the possible identity of the agents and the details of the alleged conditions. There have been numerous changes in the prohibition enforcement personnel in that district during the past year. Prohibition Administrator Jonathan Lewis declined to comment on the reports.

Wollaston House Damaged by Fire

Fire in the two and a half story wooden dwelling of Herbert F. Miller, contractor, 49 South Central ave., Wollaston, today destroyed the upper part of the structure and badly damaged the first floor. Miller and his family were absent at the time. A pet cat made its escape by jumping from the second story window.

The residence is located in a thickly settled section of Wollaston. Chief William Sands of the Quincy fire department ordered a second alarm to prevent any possible spread of the flames.

Firemen's Gasoline Supply Is Stolen

It's a lucky thing there have been no fires in Lynnfield for two days.

In Lynn court today it was revealed that the gasoline supply of the town fire apparatus was stolen Friday night by a syphon. John Repetto, Lynnfield farmer, was charged with the crime. Police told the court he ran out of gasoline outside the station and then helped himself to the fire department supply. The case was continued a week for "investigation."

Cathedral Boys on Pemberton Outing

About 100 choir and altar boys of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross parish, were given an outing at Pemberton and Nantasket today by the Cathedral clergy, acting under direction of Cardinal O'Connell.

Rev. Neil A. Cronin, administrator of the Cathedral, designated the Rev. Harry M. O'Connor and the Rev. William B. Foley, the latter leader of the choir, to accompany the boys. Sports and dinner were followed by a trip to Paragon Park.

Garrett Default Case Postponed

A week's postponement was granted counsel for Leopold Manfredonia of East Boston, former bondsman for Oliver B. Garrett, when the State's injunction action against him and the city of Boston came before Judge Stanley E. Qua in superior court today.

The temporary restraining order, forbidding Manfredonia to receive and the city from paying a $50,000 land settlement for property taken from Manfredonia for the new traffic tunnel, was continued in force. The State's claim against Manfredonia is for $564.40 for Garrett's default when first called for trial.

HUGE BOSTON LIQUOR CLEANUP DRIVE STARTS JULY 15

4-DAY SAILINGS TO START FROM HERE SEPT. 7

Mayor Curley Makes an Announcement at Luncheon of the Crosscup-Pishon Post

Four-day sailing to Europe from Boston will be inaugurated Sept. 7, Mayor Curley announced today at a luncheon of the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, in the Hotel Bradford.

The mayor also assailed prohibition and the cost of trying unsuccessfully to enforce what he called "the noble experiment," and once more scored federal authorities for delay in starting the new postoffice.

Police Commissioner Eugene C Hultman, the other principal speaker, lauded the rank and file of the police department, declaring it had the making of the nation's finest. He said he intends to start a policeman's college next year.

The luncheon was for the purpose of boosting the wrestling tournament to be held July 14 for the benefit of disabled veterans.

WEST END MAN IN LUCK AS POLE FALLS

FLARE THE HAT, MEN; IT'S RIGHT

but in the summer a panama hat is the kind I choose. The brim of the panama, of course, is turned up, lending that additional touch of dignity."

HENRY I. HARRIMAN, president Boston Chamber of Commerce; his secretary speaking—"Mr. Harriman wears a panama in summer and a gray felt hat in winter, with the brims turned down, but with the hat straight on his head.

STANDISH WILCOX, social secretary to Mayor Curley—"A high class gentleman always wears the brim of his hat turned up. The turned-down fad was started 30 years ago at Newport, R. I., by Berry Wall and Harry Lehr, fashionplates of their time. In the summer time I sometimes wear a stiff straw, but when a soft straw is on my head—the brim is turned up."

POLICE COMMISSIONER HULTMAN—"The police view with suspicion most people who have their hats down over their eyes. The only reason I turn mine down is to keep the sun out of my eyes."

EDMUND A. DOLAN, City Treasurer—"I guess it's fifty-fifty with me. Sometimes up and sometimes down. When it's down I don't think I lose any of my dignity."

MARTIN LOMASNEY—"That's a silly —— —— thing to talk about. Forget about it. The —— with it. I have no use for Shaw, anyway. Who the heck cares how you wear your hat?"

And after the Inquiring Reporter had compiled all this information, he found that the brim of his hat was turned down in front and up in back. He is still trying to figure out whether he looks dignified or just plain hard-working.

HOW YOU DRAW FIRST COMIC

which are usually put in in pencil and erased when the ink is dry.

MUST STAND OUT

In the third and fourth pictures we run our plot along to the grand climax, which is always saved for the last picture.

Remember to draw your "daffydils" with heavier strokes of the pen than you use in drawing your background. They are your main characters and must stand out.

See how far a few lines can represent emotions as well as an oil painting. In the third picture the "daffydil" is stamping his feet in anger. Now look in picture five. See how triumphantly he walks away? Without any further coaching you should be able to draw your "daffydils", in all kinds of situations.

When you've practiced some ——, rule off another strip of paper and draw a "daffydil" strip of your own. You will be astonished to find how much fun you can have making your characters do exactly what you want them to.

Here's one of those trade secrets we told you about. See how the fence is shaded with little dots in the last picture. You are probably wondering how I managed to get them so even. It's not hard.

A TRADE SECRET

As a matter of fact, I didn't do it at all. All I did was shade the fence lightly with blue crayon and mark on the side "light dot benday," and the engravers did the rest when they made the plate from which the pictures are printed. They simply stuck a transparent sheet covered with those tiny dots over the picture and rubbed the dots off where they weren't wanted. Neat? I should think so.

Now that's our secret. Don't breathe a word.

I hope you're keeping the drawings as you go along. Don't be afraid to branch out and try your own effects.

Tomorrow we go onto Tom Power's famous "Joy" and "Gloom" characters. Mr. Powers, whose striking cartoons appear frequently in the Boston Evening American, will tell you how he can make his figures, only a little more detailed than the "daffydils," express his ideas with the maximum of punch. Follow this instructive drawing course in the Evening American every day.

Robbers Pose as Police, Get $175

Police Commissioner Hultman today is investigating charges by Anthony Katowsciz, 40, of 76 Boston st., South Boston, that two men claiming to be policemen held him up in his house and robbed him of $175.

FEDERAL FORCE PREPARES TO 'DRY UP' CITY

Every Known or Suspected Illegal Source of Supply Has Been Tabulated

Plans are complete for the biggest liquor cleanup in Boston's prohibition history, to start July 15, it was guardedly revealed today by federal officials.

Every known or suspected "speakeasy" in Greater Boston has been tabulated by undercover agents.

Information has been obtained by route officers of the Boston police and passed on to the United States forces.

Sidewalk bootleggers, drug stores plying an illicit trade and every kind of illegal vendor of liquor will be hit by the drive.

FULL CO-OPERATION

Full co-operation will exist between several branches of the federal law enforcement service.

"This office will render every assistance in the big liquor push," said Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. John J. Walsh, Jr., who is in charge of liquor case prosecutions for the government.

The Rev. Jonathan S. Lewis prohibition administrator for the Massachusetts district, while refusing to speak definitely of the plans for the cleanup, credited reporters who questioned him with "a good nose for news."

SPECIAL SCHOOL

Reports on conditions handed in by undercover agents of the Department of Justice, as well as by police officials, will be the subject of study by prohibition agents at a special school which opens Wednesday in the Franklin st. office of the administrator.

Administrator Lewis refused to discuss the plans, but admitted that men from his office had been in Washington acting as instructors and are due back to give instructions to men who will attend the local school, which will run for a 12-day period.

REALTY GROUP TO DISCUSS MORATORIUM

Bankers Wary of Hurley Plan to Relieve Home-Owners

Action on State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley's plan to declare a two-year moratorium on realty mortgage payments for unemployed home owners will be taken at the next meeting of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to be held July 14, President John T. Burns announced today.

The Boston Real Estate Exchange may do likewise later, it was indicated.

Hurley's proposal also included lowering interest rates and permitting savings banks to loan a larger share of their funds on home mortgages.

Opinion on State Treasurer Hurley's suggestion was met with considerable opposition, particularly with regard to new legislation. Real estate and bank men were disposed to "go slow," and many declared that the situation is now being handled satisfactorily, with consideration of each individual case on its merits.

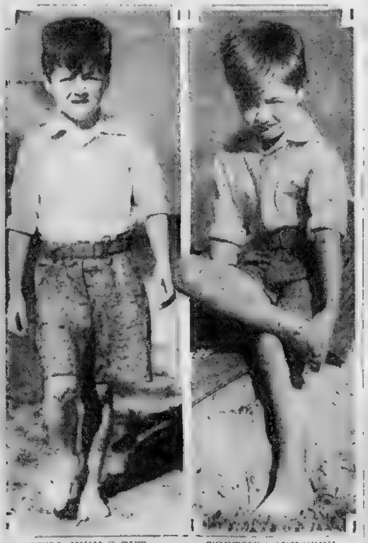

GIRL IS CLEARED OF HIT-AND-RUN

Miss Agnes Prenderville, 31, of New York, a bathing girl who was reported chased after an accident yesterday, was cleared by police today of complaints that she drove away without making her identity known.

Her automobile figured in a slight collision with that of Matthew McKinnon of 16 Charger st., Revere, at Tremont st. and Massachusetts ave., South End.

Several machines followed her to Broadway and Tremont st., but police said she reported the accident later.

WOMAN MARRIES BECAUSE MAN WANTS HER TO

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN A woman marries a man it is for just one reason—because the man WANTS her to. Because he has made up his mind to marry her!

HELEN ROWLAND.

Don't all speak at once. I know that tha is heresy. I know it's against all the old-fashioned theories that woman is the secret and subtle pursuer—the setter of traps and snares, who "gets her man" by a thousand wiles and gentle coerce.on.

I know that the great Shaw in his play, "Man and Superman," has portrayed the vamp and the man trapper in her most vivid colors. But Bernard was all wrong.

I have watched the game, from a distance and at close range, and I have never yet seen a woman succeed in marrying the man she set out to capture—NOT a real he-men.

In the case of a very weak or very young man and a strong determined girl, the man-trapping business may sometimes succeed. And, sometimes, a wobbly young man wakes up and can't remember how or why he married—except that the girl suggested it.

But, while women will always seek to catch men, the average woman almost never captures the man she sets out to catch. She always comes back from the hunt with another "trophy." And finds herself trotting happily to the altar with a man she had never dreamed of marrying, until he broke the news to her, put up the selling talk, and finally broke down her resistance.

Human nature never changes—particularly masculine nature. There is a thick, hard-shell coating of resistance that covers the masculine brain; and no woman can "convince" a man of anything. Certainly, no woman can convince any man that he LOVES her. Or that he wants to marry her.

A man often thinks that he will marry a girl, until he discovers that SHE thinks so, too. Then his love promptly turns to suspicion.

I once wrote cynically, "ALL husbands think they are prizes—but most of them are merely consolation prizes." That is true, of course—because, in spite of all our modern cynicism, most women DO love the men they marry, and believe that they have drawn the Big Prize in the matrimonial lottery.

But, in nine cases out of ten, it is not the man for whom a woman has set her cap, that she marries; but the man who happened to set his heart on her, when she happened to be looking the other way. The man who was only one of the crowd, until he picked her out and made up her mind for her.

A husband is often a prize—but he is always a SURPRISE!

Adds Beauty to Your Tones

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

JUST HOW important the speaking voice is to the charm and loveliness of a woman can be realised when we consider the many world famous stage and screen stars who have given years to the grooming and cultivation of a pleasant and cultured speaking voice.

Voices that prove monotonous to the listeners rasp their ears and send them running from earshot, should be trained and toned just as we cultivate perfect grooming to our appearance. If you have ever listened to a woman with a well-modulated voice talk for any length of time without wearying her listeners, her conversation surely seemed more intelligent and worthwhile than if she had droned along without ever raising or lowering her voice.

Deep breathing exercises are the first step in developing a pleasant speaking voice. Stand erect with the shoulders rasied to their full height and, with the lips closed, inhale while counting to ten, then open the lips and with teeth together exhale forcibly. Close the lips and then exhale, forcing the exhalation so that a hissing sound is made. Repeat 25 times.

Still in erect standing position, inhale as before, then, as you exhale, hum as softly as possible. Inhale, then with the voice raised ever so little, exhale. Repeat until you have gone up and down the scale twice.

If these breathing exercises are repeated each day you'll soon be amazed at your own speaking voice, it will be so flexible. With this flexibility of tone modulation, so that a once harsh or sing-song voice will take on a smoothness and rhythm that will be pleasing to the listeners.

Even humming is good for voice culture but one must also breathes properly while humming softly; it soothes and exercises the lungs and vocal organs and puts one in entire command of every word and its tone.

Have you ever noticed a well-groomed woman command attention by speaking without raising her voice in the least? This is done simply by expression and a well-trained voice, which in turn makes for perfect diction and adds greatly to the charm and loveliness of any woman.

IN STEP WITH SHOES

—SKETCHED IN PARIS

Mme Julienne is exhibiting a number of interesting shoes and sandals in the colonial exposition now open in Paris. The sketch shows an afternoon shoe with matching purse, both in green crepe marocain dotted with white and combined with darker green antelope. Chinese heads carved from cocoanut shells decorate the side of the shoe and serve as a clasp on the purse. The lower sketch shows a sandal in bright green kid combined with white cotton braid. The two buttons are of carved green and white wood.

The charming afternoon hat sketched is from Mme. Jose's Summer collection.

Women Are Well Shod Abroad

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 29—Unless one is beautifully shod, it is impossible to keep in step in the fashion parade. Shoes this season are more important than ever. Shoes must be individual, but the too ornate is frowned upon for daytime wear, however formal the occasion. Of the models now being worn, the opera pump, plain and in many interesting variations, and also the sandal, seem to be first favorites. Sandals are ideal for warm weather wear besides being kind to the foot that is inclined to be a bit unkind to its owner.

The classic opera apparently is on an eternal march along the pathway of fashion, for it is with its reason after season. Indeed, there are some fashionable women who are so addicted to this style of shoe that they wear it in various fabrics and leathers for all occasions from sports to very grand formal events. Popular this year is the idea of pairing the shoe and handbag, one of the many new and enriched accessories ideas.

Sketches of the models which Mme. Julienne is exhibiting at the colonial exposition are shown. The Julienne shoes and sandals shown are splendid examples of the modern maker's craft as can be seen from the sketches. The afternoon shoe and purse are both in shimmering green crepe, dotted with white and combined with darker green antelope. Chinese heads carved from cocoanut shells decorate the side of the shoe and serve as a clasp on the purse. The lower drawing shows a smart sandal in bright green kid combined with white cotton braid. The two buttons are of green and white carved wood.

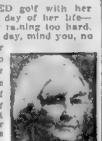

The charming afternoon hat is by Mme. Jose. The chocolate colored picot straw is simply but attractively trimmed with two shades of satin ribbon, one matching the tone of the straw, the other a delicate creamy pink. Slashes in the straw enable the ribbons to appear both below and above the brim and a small bow is placed at the left side, rather far back.

'NO BRAINS,' HUBBY MAY BE RIGHT

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE PLAYED golf with her husband every day of her life—when it wasn't raining too hard.

Every single day, mind you, no matter whether she wanted to play or not. For ten months, she dragged herself around the golf course, and let husband tell her what was the matter with her game.

Winifred Black

At the end of the tenth month, one windy day when you could hardly keep on your feet on the far side of the course where she was the worst, the wind was the worst, the woman told her husband she was very tired and she thought she would go home.

And her husband clapped her face!

She never played golf with him again.

But she played bridge with him until he began to find fruit with every play she made. And when she told him she did not wish to play bridge any more, Husband, with his usual brilliant habit of repartee, slapped her in the face again!

Then the girls began to call Husband up.

By day they called him, and by night they called him—when he happened to be at home. And Husband sat at the telephone and "bidded" someone he called "Cutey" and "strung along" someone he called "Blondie," and once she heard Husband blow a really natural sounding kiss into the telephone.

Still she never thought of leaving Husband.

Husband spent his money on other women and he spent his time with other women and he never bought his wife a new dress or a new coat or even a new hat for two whole years.

And during that time the husband of the wife's sister bought her six new dresses and three above mentioned two parisely good coats, one fur and one some kind of a silky thing with a lace collar—you know . . . and with sort of fancy buckles or buttons or clasps or something.

Husband did not pay the rent and it was a good deal of a nuisance explaining to the Landlord about that.

But still the woman did not divorce her husband.

But one day, no it was one evening, at a little dinner party in a restaurant her husband leaned across the table and said right before all the guests and the waiters:

"You haven't an ounce of brains—an ounce—it's my opinion you have no brains at all, none at all!"

He said these things in a loud, vulgar voice, and he pointed his finger at his wife as nobody could possibly think he meant anyone else.

On the next morning the woman filed suit for divorce.

They said she's going to get the divorce, too.

And yet somehow I can't help thinking, that after all, maybe husband was telling the truth. The plain truth, and nothing but the truth.

Especially when you think about the golf and the bridge and the caps and the girls on the telephone.

What do you think?

'Whoopee' Disgusts This Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

May I put a few word into your column? I read it and sometimes wonder whether to pity these girls or to laugh at them. They complain because their parents are too strict and do not let them lead a "whoopee life," and smoke and drink. Oh! how I envy them! If I could only exchange places with them for one week! Then they would gladly go back to their strict parents.

My father and two brothers smoke, swear and drink. I've enough intoxicating liquor to last the sight of it. I cannot imagine how some girls can crave this life. If it were not for my wonderful mother and her brave efforts, I could not have graduated from high school. My brother does not care what I do.

UNHAPPY DAUGHTER.

Dear Daughter: It is a blessing that you have a kind and understanding mother for you have evidently suffered much through father and brothers. I often wonder if the girls who complain of "strict" parents do not often feel a little pride that they have such parents. If a girl uses a little diplomacy and tact, she can usually manage to bring her parents around to her way of thinking.

Stepmother's Problem

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago I married a widower with three daughters. Two of the girls are still in boarding school, but one has a position and lives with us. Her attitude toward me is like a stranger. She criticises me openly and has asked me not to use her mother's linens so frequently. My husband once said no words could ever cause his children to leave home.

I love my husband, but, as he never reprimands this daughter for her insults to me, I cannot help questioning his love for me. At 46 one has to dress well and, when I make a new purchase, my stepdaughter lectures me on "thrift." I have tried to keep peace because my husband is not well.

EILEEN.

Dear Eileen: I agree with you that yours is a very hard situation to meet. You love your husband and wish to keep peace, but you are in a constant state of unhappiness by the critical attitude of your stepdaughter. Why not start out on a campaign to win this girl's affection? It will take a great deal of patience no doubt, but I believe it could be done. Perhaps you could start by planning some pleasant surprise for the two young sisters.

Etiquette for the Bride's Reception

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—At a reception for a bride or dinner, who sits down first, the hostess, guest of honor, or the bride?

2—When the bride is hostess for the first time does she sit down first?

3—When drinking the health of a bride and groom, is it correct for the bride to stand when others are seated (to be toasted)? That is, should she stand up with her husband?

4—Does she also drink this toast, or can she drink a toast to her husband?

5—What are the usual formsir words spoken by her in acknowledgment of the toast?

When asking this series of questions I have in mind a young wife who goes out for the first time among her husband's friends, who are all strangers to her.

C. R.

1—The hostess.

2—Yes.

3—The bride need not stand.

4—Since they are being toasted together, the bride does not drink this toast.

5—She bows graciously, in acknowledgment of the toast, and merely says, "Thank you. You are most kind," or "Thank you. What kind friends you are! We appreciate your goodness to us," or some other simply worded expression of appreciation.

He Was Gallant and Shouldn't Have Been Refused

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When leaving a small party one evening, my escort offered to help me put on my overshoes. I told he should not do it. Was I correct?

2. It is correct to take my partner's arm at the end of the dance, when being escorted from the floor? My contention is that it is old-fashioned and no longer done.

E. A.

1. No. Your escort was polite in his suggestion to be of service, and you should have accepted his gallant and helpful suggestion.

2. You are right.

Let the Young Man Ask to Write

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for a young lady to ask a young man to write to her when they are not to see each other for some time, or should it be the other way around? My friend and I have been pondering over this question for days until, finally, we have decided to consult you.

E. M.

The gentleman is given this prerogative of asking the girl if he may have the privilege of writing to her. If she consents, he writes first to her.

LATEST IN FASHIONS

YOU MUST be the judge or the fitness of the printed frock this season, for the fashion is an individual rather than a universal one. But you must agree on the merits of a printed black on white chiffon evening frock with white chiffon straps and a lingerie decolletage. Color is introduced by a cerise taffeta bow with long ends.

THE LINEN lineup is stronger than ever in favor of linen. Typical of the mode is a sports frock with a "bathing suit" jumper of black linen embroidered in dull blue and belted in dark blue to match the pleated linen skirt.

GO AWAY in a smart travelling coat. One of the newest models is of rough tweed in a tan, henna brown and orange mixture. It has a self belt, side fastening and a self scarf wide enough to look like a shallow cape.

You Must Remember Heart Tires When Abused

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NEWSPAPER headlines tell us every day of the sudden and unexpected death of some noted person. The sudden loss is almost always explained as due to heart disease.

Many of these deaths could have been avoided. Heart disease is rarely an acute affair. The end may come suddenly, but the progress of the ailment has been over a course of many years.

The heart is a muscular organ. Its function is to pump blood through the body. When the blood has received oxygen from the lungs and nutritive elements from the food, it is pumped to all parts of the body. There the oxygen has been used and the nutritive elements removed the blood returns to the heart and starts again on its circuit of the body.

A tremendous amount of work is demanded of the heart. When the organ is tired, its power to work is lessened. If the heart is diseased, its efficiency is lessened and less hard work should be expected of it.

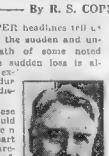

Like any other muscle is the body, the heart muscles become fatigued. With rest and proper care, the muscle is rejuvenated and again works normally.

No unreasonable demands should be placed upon the heart. It surely should not be called upon for overwork when it is tired. It should never be strained if diseased.

Many a foolish person demands that the heart work at any and all times. Regardless of how many hours of sleep he has had what type of food he may have eaten, and with no respect for the kidneys and blood vessels, he expects the heart to work properly. Certainly, only a fool man would make such demands on his heart and other organs.

Please remember that medical men today are deserving to prevent diseases, not to cure them. Many diseases are incurable but most of them are preventable.

Have you had a physical examination lately. Please see your family physician and insist upon his examining your heart, lungs and blood pressure. Then he will advise you wisely how to live.

Dr. Copeland

Answers to Health Questions

J. A. Q.—Would particular pill tablets help tremors of the neck muscles probably caused by thyroid deficiency? Would such medication be apt to affect the digestion or have any other effect upon the system?

A.—Yes, it would be most unwise to attempt such medication unless it had been definitely prescribed for your particular case. The practice of taking drugs or medicines indiscriminately should be discouraged.

MISS E. B. Q.—What do you advise for a red nose? I am only 22 years of age and troubled in this way, especially upon arising in the mornings?

A.—This is usually indicative of an intestinal condition. Watch your diet, avoiding rich foods, and be sure to keep the system clear. For full particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat question.

H. R. Q.—Could I contract tuberculosis by visiting a friend who has tuberculosis of the kidney?

A.—No.

THE BEAUTY BOX

THERES A long trail a-winding at the back of many of the new hostess gowns and negligees for many of these models have long trains. Most regal is a gown of henna and gold lame over a petticoat of gold lace. The gown is form fitting and there is a long narrow train.

Che hats worn off the face are getting smaller and smaller. Rimeby they'll be about as big as thimbles. Anyhow, they not only make necessary a charming arrangement of front hair, but they go out for ruffs at the rear. Designers of coiffures are showing new arrangements, and factory hair is coming back again. Not great wads, of course, like those prehistoric things called switches, but cunning fringes that burst into ringlets at the edges, and sausage curls in groups of three or five.

Women who take prolonged hot baths for the purpose of reducing will get better results if they finish up with a cold shower. Heat is weakening, sweating burns up muscles as well as fat. A cold bath following the hot one keeps tissues from becoming soft. No sense in getting rid of adipose and answers if flesh is to be flubby and sagg.

Little chignons of half a dozen curls or puffs are being worn by the girls who like to skip ahead of the fashion parade. To spot these chignon tinglets, it is necessary to be blessed with naturally curly hair, or to buy a hard boiled wave at the beauty shop. The best length of hair for the arrangement is 6 inches. The back hair is tied, and the puffs are fastened with invisible hair pins, supported by a narrow barrette.

HONORABLE MENTION

An Irish groom had been imported into this country with some jumpers.

"Nonsense," he said. "is certainly the foggiest place in the world."

"Oh, no, it is not," said his pal. "I've been in a place much foggier than London."

"Where was that?" said the Irishman.

"I don't know where it was," replied the second man, "It was so foggy."

Do You Know That---

More than 41,000 trees have been planted this spring in the Kentenia national forest Harlan County, Ky.

Construction contractors in the New Orleans territory showed a boom in April of $1,314,000 over the same month in 1930.

Illinois counties will spend about $15,000,000 for highway purposes this year in construction of more than 500 miles of roads and 152 bridges.

Each person in the United States spent an average of $40 last year for recreational travel, according to the Chicago Motor Club.

LOCAL HORSES ENTERED IN ROCKINGHAM MEET

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Week of the Fourth. — Pone and Molasses?
A Big One in Sport. — No—Sauerkraut!
What's on the Menu? — Aw, Fire the Cook!

Looking Over Holiday Week Sport Calendar

Will the Georgia Cracker explode on Eve of Fourth.
Echoing down through Dixie and booming through the North?
Or will Herr Maxey Schmeling, he of the Squawk and Cry,
Shoot off Teuton fireworks for a Dutch Fourth of July?

Search us, Percival. We'll try tomorrow to get excited enough to risk an opinion of what is likely to happen in the week of the Glorious Fourth's chief fistic feature, the Shindy of Clutch and Squawk, which also might be yclept the "Soiree of Sauerkraut and Corn Pone." Today, to save our life, we can't seem to wake up any appetite for it—

What are we goin' to eat, Ma, on Eve of Fourth of July?
What is on the menu for a sporting guy?
What! Sauerkraut and Corn Pone! Oi! Geeve it a look!
Why that Feed only makes us want to fire the Cook!

There probably will be more pure and unadulterated action in every round of the Sammy Fuller vs. Steve Halaiko encounter at Braves Field, tonight, than there will be in the whole fifteen spasms of the Battle of Clutch and Squawk out there on the bonny banks and braes o' Lake Erie abaft Cleveland, next Friday night. But Max the Squawk and Willie the Clutch are fighting for the world's heavyweight championship and the purple toga worn by the great John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Dempsey and Tunney. So the Schmeling-Stribling embroglio is of national interest and sticks out on the sports menu like a wart on a fat lady's hand.

Fourth of July Week always is a big week in sport. This week is no exception. In addition to the heavyweight shindy for the Cauliflower Championship of the Universe, Ohio bags another blue ribbon sports classic in the shape of the National Open Golf Tournament in which the world's greatest golfers will be fighting it out on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Still another American championship tournament will be staged at Lincoln, Nebraska, Friday and Saturday, when athletic clans from all over the country will assemble for the annual national amateur track and field championships. This being pre-Olympic year, there is an abundance of athletic material and athletic history certainly will be made.

Chief interest in New England and a large section of the East centers in New England's return to horse racing, throwing open of the beautifully remodelled Rockingham Park and the launching of the big 33 day race meeting. Lou Smith and his associates have done wonders with the Salem race course. They have waved the magic wand of Merlin over Salem and turned a dilapidated old race track and a desert like expanse into a blooming oasis of green turf and landscaped lawns. We chuckled when Lou landed in town and boasted he was going to make another Saratoga out of Salem. We're not chuckling now. Lou has the last laugh!

Not only has Smith made a Garden of Eden out of Rockingham but he has chased Old Man Depression out of Salem. Racing coming to Rockingham has been a Godsend to the good folk of that section of New Hampshire. There are 1500 men employed at Rockingham and of that number more than 1400 are natives. Stores, restaurants, hotels and other business houses in the vicinity are doing a land office business and will do more from now on. The section is profiting for fifty miles around. The owners, jockeys officials, race followers are searching high and low for houses, rooms, board in beauty spots ten, fifteen, twenty, thirty miles from Salem. The race meeting is attracting thousands of summer visitors to that section of New Hampshire. It is providing a living and banishing Hard Times for thousands.

Which touches upon and appertains to the fact that a million people would be given employment if prohibition was amended and the manufacture and sale of light wine and beers encouraged. Work, money would be given the farmer and his help who grow the grapes, grain and hops; brewery and bottling workers, salesmen, hotel, restaurant, store owners and employes. But that is getting out of the sports terrain. Let's turn to the Big Grapple of the Grunt and Groan.

The Big Grapple of the Grunt and Groan takes place tonight in Yankee Stadium, New York, and thousands of babies will profit by it, for part of the proceeds will be donated to Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund, that wonderful charity which has done and is doing so much for the poor of New York. Jim Londos and Ray Steele will be the principals. While a Londos-Steele match here in New England would cause no one to get unduly excited, Gotham is going to it, hook, line and sinker.

New York is so excited over the Milk Fund Wrestling Carnival that all gate receipts for wrestling matches are likely to be shattered. All the signs along the trail are that with good weather conditions, the $94,000 gate Frank Gotch and George Hackenschmidt drew in White Sox Park, Chicago, way back in 1911 will be surpassed. More than 50,000 persons are expected to go through the turnstiles. The wrestling attendance record is sure to be broken. The gate receipts record also would be sure to go if it were not for the fact the show is being staged at such reasonable prices. At least $50,000 should be obtained for the Milk Fund.

You talk about Depression, you wail to beat the band
On the terrible conditions existing in our land;
If that is so, pray tell us, for we can't understand
How a pair of Grunt and Groaners attract a Hundred Grand?

By BILL GRIMES

As usual, there is a lull in golf this week, due to the holiday but unlike recent years there are two tournaments, Walpole and Coonamessett scheduled.

Both Walpole and Coonamessett are new courses but are in exceptionally fine condition and prime for their first M. G. A. events. The Walpole open is listed from tomorrow and Wednesday while Coonamessett is on for Friday and the holiday. Although Walpole is a nine-hole unit it is rated highly while Coonamessett is a coming championship layout and expects one of the largest crowds of the season.

As an extra attraction, the Coonamessett Golf Club has arranged for an 18 hole exhibition match Saturday afternoon, while Fred J. Wright, the State amateur champion, and Billy McPhail play Jesse Guilford and Emery P. Stratton.

The New England Professional [illegible] Organization is at the [illegible] Country Club today playing a 36-hole straight professional tournament [illegible] [illegible] successfully defend the title she won at Oakley last year.

United States Open Begins Thursday

The big event in golf will be the United States open championship, which gets underway next Thursday at the Inverness Country Club [illegible] Toledo, O. Due to the absence of [illegible] Bobby Jones [illegible]

Although the British Ryder cup players will be out in quest of the title which Bobby Jones allowed to go by default, Henry Cotton is about the only serious foreign threat. Cotton is rated as the outstanding Briton professional and is looked upon as a real contender.

American Yacht Wins in Scotland

Largs, Scotland, June 29 (AP)—The American six-meter yacht Lucie won again in her class on the Clyde today, but Johnston De Forests Priscilla III finished second behind the British yacht Sakia in the eight-meter class. Caryl was third behind Priscilla.

Saskia won by a minute after Priscilla had led at every turn, making up the [illegible] on the last windward leg.

BAER, UZCUDUN WAR THIS WEEK

New York, June 29 (AP)—The thickest slice of fistic interest will go to Cleveland this week while most of the remainder will be shared by Reno, Nev., Jersey City and Chicago.

Cleveland gains the top [illegible] with the 15-round heavyweight championship bout between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling Friday night.

Max Baer of California and Paulino Uzcudun of Spain heavyweights are matched for a 20-round bout at Reno on Saturday.

Jersey City offers a featherweight title bout on Wednesday between Christopher (Bat) Battalino of Hartford, Ct., and Irish Bobby Brady, Jersey City [illegible]. They will battle ten rounds or less at the Jersey City ball park.

Ketchell to Meet Price at Salem

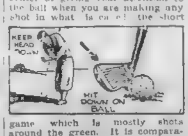

Steve Ketchell of [illegible] [illegible] Price of Lynn [illegible] the feature eight round [illegible]

Johnny [illegible] Newport Johnny Brown of Cambridge in the special six [illegible] semifinal number. Jackie Collins of Haverhill clashes with Alex Ver[illegible] of Taunton in another six while Scoops Rodier of Salem meets Joe Dow of Lawrence and Charley Polcaro of Medford will oppose Stonewall Jackson of Lynn in two other six-rounders.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Make every factor you can bring to bear work toward the common center of giving your attention to the ball when you are making any shot in what is called the short game which is mostly shots around the green. It is comparatively easy to master the straight mechanics of this play which have been outlined in previous articles but to give your whole attention to the ball, and avoid looking up from it is perhaps the most difficult hurdle with these shots. Experience perhaps has taught you that ere now. Keep always in mind that the nearness of the objective, the pin, is a magnet for your attention. Look at the back of the ball. Make your stroke, then look up.

Crystal Ball Tells How Title Bout Will Come Out

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Here is the Schmeling-Stribling bout as we see it in our crystal ball.

Schmeling leads with a liverwurst sandwich. Stribling ducks, and counters with corn pone.

Schmeling follows with a stein to the mouth.

Stribling staggers, but recovers in time to send a handful of Kentucky "mountain dew" to Schmeling's beezer.

Schmeling calls for time out, and phones Berlin for advice.

Schmeling advised to observe prohibition amendment. Refuses to take drink.

Stribling hops into airplane. Schmeling grabs bicycle.

Race begins to exit. Stribling lets fall depth bomb.

Stribling leads at altitude of 10,000 feet.

Schmeling sets non-stop bike record. Signs up with Nat Butler to race at Revere track.

Bout is declared draw. Box office claims foul. Fans go home and take pledge.

The next bout will be for the heavyweight championship of East Bagwood.

Harvard, Tabor Crews Work Out

Henley-On-Thames, Eng., June 29 (AP)—The Harvard third varsity and the Tabor Academy crew, the two American eights at Henley for the regatta, had only light workouts this morning, just paddling on regatta course with some short bursts of rowing.

Both crews have adopted the policy of light workouts early in the day and a more strenuous row late in the afternoon.

The oarsmen were honor guests at a luncheon at the Phyllis Court Club.

$750,000 Race Meet Opens at Chicago

Chicago, June 29 (INS)—Arlington Park opens its rich $750,000-purse meeting with a $11,000 inaugural handicap, in which the old reliable Gallant Knight is the favorite.

Twenty-five horses entered the event.

Hundreds of Horses Arrive for Races

By HENRY J. DISKEN

Salem, N. H., June 29—Three of the most prominent Massachusetts horse owners will place entries in the 34-day meet, which opens at Rockingham Park on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree, Hamilton; Bayard Tuckerman, and Augustus F. Goodwin, all whom have been prominently identified with the turf, and whose efforts have made the annual Eastern Horse Club meet here such an outstanding success, will have entries at the Salem track.

Over 35 thoroughbreds belonging to the trio mentioned, are now quartered at the park. They have given the New Hampshire Breeders' Association, under whose auspices the meet will be conducted every assurance of their co-operation.

Tuckerman and Goodwin have volunteered their services at the New Hampshire track, and will assist in laying out the steeplechase course.

Over 500 Horses Now at Rockingham

More than 500 horses are stabled at Rockingham Park. Three hundred are due to arrive here within the next 24 hours, and just as many more will start East as soon as Secretary Munroe wires the word that stall accommodations are available.

Entries for the opening day's race will be taken tomorrow and with a thousand head on hand every event listed on the program should fill. The inaugural handicap, feature event listed for the first day, will be run off as the fourth race. Nominations filed this morning indicate that there will be a large field to go to the post. Declarations close tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Thoroughbreds registered at the track represent every section of the country and many well known stables will sport their silks at the meeting. The average is surprisingly high. Handicap horses are plentiful for all events. Sprinters get the call on Wednesday, but the fifth race, a purse over the mile route offers conditions that should send a classy field to face the barrier.

HEAVY TITLE GO MAY DRAW $400,000

Cleveland, June 29 (AP)—The Stribling-Schmeling world's heavyweight championship fight here next Friday night will be no million dollar affair, but if it draws $400,000 there will be no wails of protest from the promoters.

This was indicated today when officials of the Madison Sq. Garden Corporation of Ohio declared they would be "extremely satisfied" if the gate receipts hit the $400,000 mark. Figures revealed for the first time showed [illegible] in cash already in the bank with $89,000 to be added in reservations certain to be picked up.

Although the advance sale is actually $176,000, the total advance counting the reservations, [illegible] to $265,000, thus assuring [illegible] success for the fight. The promoters hope [illegible] $150,000 [illegible] today and [illegible] draws [illegible] already seen [illegible] Madison Square Garden Corporation will have a profit [illegible] $51,000. Stribling and Schmeling will get [illegible] per cent with the champion receiving 40 per cent of this amount.

Max and Strib End Hard Training

Both Stribling and the champion were resting today, their hard training finished except for a little boxing tomorrow night. Stribling ended his five weeks training grind last night with four rounds of boxing another round of shadow boxing and still another punching the heavy bag.

Schmeling's work was impressive.

The referee question was the important issue of today, with the Cleveland Boxing Commission meeting to make its decision on the third man in the ring and the judges.

YOUNG TO FACE SELIGMA

Salib Seligma, who wrestles Jack "Tiger" Young in the feature bout of the Massachusetts Wrestling Association bouts at Nat Butler's Revere cycle track on Wednesday night, arrives in town for his battle early Wednesday.

In the semi-final Jumbo Runnul of Vermont will meet Al Peckham of Dorchester in a 10-minute limit battle.

The preliminaries have George Linehan of Wayland vs. Art Trevarus, New York; Billy Dolan, Dedham, vs. Art Davis, Boston; Rocky Stone vs. Great Unknown.

Neponset Victor

Neponset Wanderers maintained their position in second place in the Dorchester Twilight League by defeating Madden club, 6 to 4 at Garvey playground, Neponset yesterday.

EX-YALE STAR IN COURT WIN

St. Louis, June 29 (AP)—William M. Martin Jr. of New York, former Yale University player, defeated Jules Neuman, St. Louis, in the first match of the national clay court tennis championship at the Triple A Club here today. Martin appeared in good form, winning from Neuman 6-1, 6-1.

Other results:

George J. Jennings, Chicago, defeated C. [illegible] St. Louis, 6—0, 6—1.

Sidney [illegible] St. Louis, defeated Fred Lepell, Chicago, 6—1, 6—1.

5 Sunday Hits Give Webb .370 Mark; 3d in League

Big Earl Webb, mighty Red Sox slugger, is climbing up in the American League batting race by leaps and bounds.

His five hits, including two home runs and a double, in Sunday's doubleheader against the Browns brought his average up to .370, which places him third among the leading batters in the circuit.

'Webby' leads both leagues in doubles with a total of 31 and more than half of the 87 safeties he has made have been for extra bases. In addition to his doubles, he has banged out ten home runs and three triples.

FULLER FACES RING TEST AGAINST HALAIKO

PAIR CLASH TONIGHT AT WIGWAM

By JACK CONWAY

Sammy Fuller, colorful little North Ender who blazes away with both hands once the gong sounds, will try to pump new life into the local boxing situation when he collides with Steve Halaiko of Buffalo in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field tonight.

The dear old fistic sport was very much on the ropes in the Hub recently when Fuller stepped to bat and licked Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, in a bang-up battle.

Jack Conway

Fuller is one of those rugged youngsters who parades to close quarters and opens fire with both dukes. Sammy does his best execution with his left hook, which he shoots to the head and body with equal effect.

They haven't handed Fuller any bargain tonight. Halaiko, like Fuller, carries the torch of Flaming Youth. He came roaring up out of the amateurs, where he had won a flock of titles and enough cups to satisfy even a tennis player.

Since turning pro, Halaiko has been hammering his way out front. Only recently he won from Sammy Mandell, former world's lightweight champion, in a skirmish at Rochester. He then hopped to Boston, where he stopped Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge at Braves Field.

Halaiko looked like a first class fighting man in the Renault [illegible]. He kept his left hand popping like bullets [illegible] from a machine gun, while he clicked with his right when he got the proper openings.

The Buffalo youngster is fast and clever when in there under fire. He looks a great deal like some of the boxers of ten years ago who knew what the fundamentals of the ring game were all about.

Jack Conway Picks Fuller to Win Over Halaiko

Jack Conway today picked Sammy Fuller to win from Steve Halaiko in their 10-round bout at Braves Field tonight.

"I look for a stirring bout when Fuller and Halaiko, two of the best of the younger crop of lightweights, swing into action tonight," said Jack. "It should be a hard, close fight, with Fuller's superior ruggedness giving him the edge."

Diamond Dust

Rumors have several of the Chicago Cubs at odds with Manager Hornsby again. "Hack" Wilson, Pat Malone and Sheriff Blake, so the stories go, have aroused the ire of the pilot by indifferent playing and breaking training rules, and all three are slated to be sold at the close of the season unless they reform immediately.

Since the race started there has been talk of dissension in the ranks of the Cubs. Neither the manager nor the players will openly admit it, but where there is so much smoke, there is probably some fire.

Look at those Browns go! When they captured two games from the Red Sox on the Sabbath, they owned a winning streak of eight games and had won 11 of their last 13 starts.

They began their streak in the cellar and are now in fifth place as a result of taking three out of four from the Yanks, four out of five from the Athletics and four in a row from the Fenway flock.

The Red Sox have played six games in St. Louis this season and have lost them all. They came close to winning [illegible] of the last four, losing by a [illegible] instance, but, unfortunately, that doesn't help them any.

The Sox dropped both Sunday games by the same score 5 to 1. They went into the ninth inning of the opener with a lead of two runs, but Ed Morris weakened in the final frame and the Browns put over three runs to win.

Wallace Hebert, Browns' sensational rookie southpaw, was continually in trouble in the second game but, despite two home runs by Earl Webb, managed to win.

U. S. PAIR WIN IN ENGLISH COURT PLAY

Wimbledon Stadium, Eng., June 29 (AP)—The American youngsters, Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, Jr.; Jean Borotra, the French veteran, and Fred Perry, youthful English player, today won their way to the semi-final round of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Shields defeated H. W. "Bunny" Austin, pride of England, and the island's ranking tennis player, in the most dramatic match of the four, needing five sets to win, 6—3, 2—6, 5—7, 7—5, 6—1.

Wood won from G. P. Hughes, British Davis cup player, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1; Borotra beat the Japanese star, Jiro Satoh, also in four sets, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, while Perry disposed of John Van Ryn, the third American, in the quarter finals, in the only straight set victory, 6—4, 8—6, 7—5.

Shields and Borotra meet Wednesday in the lower half of the draw while Wood is playing Perry.

George Lott and Mrs. Harper won from C. G. Eames of England and Miss Goldschmidt of France, 6—1, 6—8, 6—0, in the mixed doubles.

Jean Borotra won his way to the semi-finals with a four-set victory over Jiro Satoh of Japan, 6—2, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. He will meet Shields in the lower half semi-final.

Austin looked like a winner until the tall American steadied his erratic play when the score was 5—4 against him in the fourth set, deuced that set, then won it and blasted the Englishman off the court in the final to win 6—1 and three sets to two.

The match was a thriller, with the crowd of 12,000 which crowded the stands of the famous center court kept in a fever of excitement.

Wood, usually a slow starter, wasn't bothered in his match when Hughes won the first set 6—4. He opened up in the next to win 6—4 and then won as he pleased in the next two, 6—3, 6—1.

Roslindale Downs Dorchester, 10-7

In an odd ball game that boosted Roslindale in its Boston Twilight league race yesterday at Fallon Field, the home club beat Dorchester 10 to 7, getting five runs in the opening inning. Dorchester came right back in the first of the second to tie the score. Roslindale clustered three more in the fourth. In the last five innings some real ball was played with Dorchester threatening several times to catch up.

LONDOS AND STEELE TILT TONIGHT

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, June 29 (US)—Tonight at the Yankee Stadium, for the benefit of the New York Free Milk Fund for Babies, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman, there will be presented the most ambitious wrestling show in the history of that game.

Jim Londos, the Greek, and Ray Steele, the Californian, meet in a contest for the world's heavyweight wrestling title, and around them in preliminary bouts have been grouped most of the famous wrestlers of the day.

Judging from the advance sale, the show will draw upward of 60,000, the largest crowd that ever saw a wrestling show, at least since the days of the old Romans, and Jack Curley believes that the gate will run over $100,000, another record.

This show is a double-header world's championship affair, as a matter of fact, though not much has been said about the other title bout on the card.

Reynolds Is Great Mat Showman

In this bout, which is an added attraction, Jack Reynolds will defend his title of welterweight wrestling champion of the world. A welterweight wrestler weighs the same as a welterweight boxer, of course, or 147 pounds.

Now this Jack Reynolds may be little but he is one of the greatest showmen of the wrestling game.

The impression persists that Steele will defeat Londos for the title tonight, but if he does the Californian will defeat one of the most thoroughly conditioned men that ever crawled through the ring ropes. I am inclined to string with the Greek.

INSPIRATION

Last night we vowed our love would last
Until the end of time
We swore by all the ancient [illegible]
That never was life sublime
Until we met. Something inspired
The lovely things we said
The heavy sighs, caresses sweet

The moon went to my head
I guess—but gee, this n[illegible] dear
It all seems so funny
I'm glad no was listening
To us. And say, Honey
Do you think the moon's in league with Cupid?
Or was it that liquor made us so stupid?

HIGH SPOTS IN A LOW LIFE

A delightful mid-winter week end (tobogganing, skating, snow fights 'neverything') with Peggy Woods, the actress, and her poet husband, John V. A. Weaver, at their country home outside of Stamford.—Bringing Felix Adler and George Harmon, clowns from the Ringling show, out to my house in full regalia to entertain three-year-old Catherine Duffy who could not go to the circus because her broken leg and shoulder were encased in plaster casts. That was two years ago and the young lady still talks about it on the slightest provocation. Sitting up all night every night for more than a week at a table in Child's with Herman Gantvoort, the producer and rewriting Hugh Stange's "The Long Road" speech by speech...A week later it went to New York and was a flop anyway...Taking the Nicest Girl I Ever Knew to a party at Phil Dunning's log cabin in Westport after the 1922 Yale-Army game.

THINGS WE LIKED

Here are some of the things that have tickled our fancy over the week-end: "The American Black Chamber," by Herbert O. Georgie Price singing "Hikin' Down the Highway" at Shore Gardens and Grace Hayes singing "Why Was I Born?" better than Helen Morgan ever thought of singing it ... Edward G. Robinson's swell job of acting in "Smart Money" at the Uptown and Olympia ... The news that Marie "Mother Goose" Mason will soon be well again.

Sales of Autos Displaying Gain

Detroit, June 29—[illegible] Longer, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet Motor Co. said final tabulation of June sales figures would show the current month ahead of June, 1930, and that he expected every remaining month this year to show a gain over the corresponding month in 1930.

"From the standpoint of Chevrolet's business," he continued, "the brightest spot in the country right now is the area along the North Atlantic seaboard. We are doing more business there than we ever [illegible]. This area [illegible] felt the effects of the stock market slump and appears to be the first to recover."

RAILS' RELIEF PLAN SOON TO BE CONSIDERED

By FRANK H. MELOON

Interstate Commerce Commission has the railroads reply to its request for additional information on the carriers plea for increased revenues, headed by [illegible], President John J. Pelley of the New Haven as chairman of the special committee of presidents representing the eastern group of rails. Open consideration of the plan is due this week. The rails mounted vigorous [illegible] when it was rumored a decision had already been reached to grant an increase in freight rates of around 7 per cent. Denial [illegible] Washington and some [illegible] the rail group [illegible] but instead it finished the week with moderate gains [illegible] this market [illegible] but there might [illegible] been another [illegible].

Sir Henry Thornton

Sir Henry Thornton, American-born head of the longest railroad system in the world, the Canadian National with 23,000 miles of track, advises the Land of the Maple Leaf to get out of the shipping business. Canada he says, could liquidate now for $10,000,000 its original investment in the merchant marine was between 80 and 90 millions of dollars, and to date the operating loss is about $57,000,000. South American lines, under the Thornton plan would be retained.

Sir Henry's suggestion recalls that of L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson, to which [illegible] several months ago would have linked the Boston & Maine. Mr. Loree declared that operating steamships was no proper part of a railroad's business, he [illegible] however is con[illegible].

Mention of Sir Henry Thornton recalls that he foresaw the current battle of the steam and automotive interests. In an address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce on April 16, 1926 Sir Henry declared the motor truck had come to stay as a competitor with railroads in short-haul competition—he might have added long haul as well.

Reports from leading finance companies indicate the percentage of delinquencies and repossessions in the early part of the present year actually declined as compared with the corresponding period last year.

Harvard Economic Society, discussing commodity prices, adopts a very cheerful view. Current letter from [illegible] the C[illegible] says:

"Commodity prices in June were already showing some signs of stabilization, before the proposal for a moratorium of intergovernmental debts resulted in a sharp advance this week.

"Current price movements indicate increased resistance to the decline which began in the middle of 1929. An examination of particular commodities reveals an irregularity of movement which lends strength to this view, while a survey of the course of foreign price indexes points in general to a similar conclusion. General conditions are now favorable to stabilization of prices, and the proposed moratorium, if adopted, will probably improve commodity markets and prices considerably earlier than could otherwise have been expected."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

More quiet trading was an outstanding feature on the New York Stock Exchange today. After a moderate volume of profit-taking had been absorbed, leaders in all sections developed a dull and steadier tone, with transactions holding around the usual midsummer volume. The market was heavy in the last hour.

J. I. Case Up 30 From Its Year's Low

Agricultural and chain store stocks were inclined today to continue the upward move which started last week. J. I. Case soon added 3½ points to its recent 16½-point rise. Case today was up about 30 points from the low price of June 2.

U. S. Steel Loses Little of Its Gain

U. S. Steel today soon lost about 2 points of its 22-point rise from the 1931 low completed Saturday, with a fair volume of profit-taking. Again big Steel and American Can duplicated each other's price trends from time to time.

7117 Added to U. S. Steel Stockholders

Stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation showed an increase of 7117 during the three months to the date of closing the books for the June dividend. The total was 156,239, compared with 149,122 in March. At the end of December there were 141,907 stockholders, and in June last year the total was 129,629.

May preferred dividends went to 58,291 stockholders, compared with 58,701 in February and 60,645 in May last year.

Accumulation in Loew's, Inc.

Accumulation in Loew's has been credited to interests prominent in the amusement field who contend that the stock is selling far out of line with other issues on the basis of prospective earnings for the year which ends August 31, next. Predictions of around $7 a share are general in well-informed quarters and it is said that results in recent weeks have been holding up much better than many expected. For the 40 weeks ended June 6, last, the company showed a profit after expenses and preferred dividends of about $5.75 a share for the common.

Over 4 Billions in Advance "On Paper"

Listed shares of 26 principal corporations have risen $4,159,000,000 from low points of year to Saturday's close. Gain is 32.14 per cent. Companies have total of 425,102,273 listed shares.

Sentiment Is Cheerful

Sentiment is cheerful. The action of the market has encouraged the bulls who are in the saddle and predictions after the close were for still higher prices in the current week unless there are some unforeseen developments to check the current enthusiasm. Conservative interests favor the use of the stops to follow the rally, and are recommending scale purchases of standard stocks on technical reactions.

Cut Dividends, Not Wages, Say Leaders

A canvass of several hundred well known manufacturing industries in Eastern United States and Canada reveals that 58 per cent of them have reduced either salaries or wages as a result of the depression, it was reported by Douglas S. Keogh, president of the Charles E. Bedaux Company.

In 15 per cent of the industries salaries only have been reduced, in 8 per cent wages only and in 21 per cent both salaries and wages.

In reply to the question: "Do you consider wage reductions a necessary prelude to the return of more favorable economic conditions?" 79 per cent of the heads of the manufacturing corporations replied "No," and only 21 per cent answered in the affirmative.

Prices Moderately Off on Big Curb

New York, June 29—Curb stocks reflected the temporary suspension of aggressive bullish operations in a less active session today and the market fell back to moderately lower price levels under the insistent pressure of profit-taking and professional short selling.

Utilities were more or less reactionary with Electric Bond & Share leading the retreat with a 2-point drop. Other soft issues included American Gas & Electric, off 1⅞, and United Light & Power, off 1⅛.

STOCK PRICES ARE SOFT IN BOSTON

Stock prices turned soft in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange after a week of bullish activity. Textile shares were the exceptions in today's market, with American Woolen preferred and Pacific Mills showing marked strength. Each issue gained around a point.

Rails, utilities and coppers all suffered alike. Atchison was down nearly 6 points, Pennsylvania over 2 and New Haven 1½. Boston & Maine prior preferred lowered 1½.

American Telephone was around 4 points lower. Point or more losses were shown for such issues as Eastern Steamship first preferred, General Electric, New Kreuger & Toll and Warren Brothers.

Anaconda Copper dropped over 2 points and St. Mary's Mineral Land was off nearly a point. Gillette dipped 2⅝.

Economy Stores was strong, gaining 3 points with S. D. Warren and Utilities Equities preferred showing like advances. United Shoe advanced a point.

FOURTH JUMP MADE IN PRICE OF COPPER

New York, June 29 (AP)—An increase of a quarter of a cent in the price of export copper today brought the quotation to 9.275 cents a pound, c.i.f. European base ports, and marked the fourth increase of a quarter of a cent in the foreign price in a week. Domestic copper was raised to 9 cts.

Meanwhile, Wall Street reports said agreement finally has been reached whereby American production in the rate of operations curtailed, with the possibility that the movement may take on international proportions.

The reduction is expected to take the form of cessation of operations at some mines and drastic reduction in the rate operations at others in line with moves recently made by some of the higher cost producing units in the West.

Indications that the proposal may extend to a further curtailment of foreign production especially in South Africa, were seen in the report that Camille Gut, one of the managing directors of the Union Miniere Du Haut Katanga had cooperated in the new plan.

M. Gutt and M. Fernard Pisart recently visited the United States on what at the time was stated was their regular semi-annual trip. At that time there were reports of conferences between the large American producers, African producers and bankers, and despite the lack of official confirmation [illegible] mines were closed immediately after the close of the conferences.

Export demand for copper has continued in heavy volume as a result of the improved European outlook following President Hoover's debt holiday proposal. Sales for export on a few occasions have exceeded 17,000,000 pounds daily.

An advance of a quarter of a cent a pound in the price of bare copper wire, to 10[illegible] cents in carload lots was announced today by General Cable Corp.

LEADERS DOWN 2 TO 5 POINTS IN WALL ST.

New York, June 29—The stock market in Wall St. had its most substantial setback today since the start of the upswing prompted by the war debt remission plan.

Trading was in light volume, but traders were inclined to take profits, on the theory that the recent advance may have been a little too rapid.

LEADERS SELL OFF

With the Franco-American debt negotiations admittedly at a difficult point, the market was inclined to hesitate, pending news from Paris. The foreign markets were better sustained than New York stocks, however, and had intervals of strength.

There were numerous losses of 2 to 5 points at the finish, with Atchison and Auburn down about 8. The decline embraced a wide list of issues, in which steels, coppers, Utilities, chemicals and rails were prominent. Transfers for the day, however, were only about 2,000,000 shares. A rally in the afternoon was short-lived, and final prices were near the day's lows.

Issues off 2 to 5 included U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Kennecott, American Smelting, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Sears, Gillette, Eastman, American & Foreign Power and Allied Chemical.

According to astute market observers, it is evident that forces are at work to keep up the extraordinary run of good tidings, and to place a favorable interpretation on them.

FORCES AT WORK.

At the same time, the elements in control are making sure that these events are capitalized to the fullest extent possible marketwise, while brushing aside unfavorable items.

However, it is poined out that some time in the near future good news may not be so abundant, especially now that it is being used up so fast. Whether the market will be able to meet the test in acceptable manner remains to be seen.

The reaction in the copper issues was in the face of a further increase of ¼ of a cent a pound, bringing the price up to 9 cents, a gain of a full cent in the past week. Even at 9 cents, however, few copper companies can show satisfactory profits.

It was felt that further gains might necessitate further curtailment of production, and it was rumored that there had been some discussions among important producers looking to that end.

While Wall St. awaited developments from Paris, bankers pointed to further pressure against the German mark as indicative of the need for speedy action. The Reichsbank has experienced a further seepage of reserves, both Saturday and today.

The $100,000,000 co-operative credit, however, is expected to take care of the July 1 credit requirements, and Federal Reserve authorities explained that if further credits are needed, the New York Federal Reserve Bank might make further purchases of Reichsbank acceptances.

Despite the sharp reductions of dividends by American companies, Wall Street estimates the midyear interest and dividend payments, much of which will be met this week, at between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000. The money market, nevertheless, showed no important signs of stiffening. Call money was available at concessions from the official rate of 1½ per cent.

Booth Fisheries Has Quick Freezing

Booth Fisheries Co. has perfected and secured patents on a simplified process for quick freezing of perishables which it will use in freezing fish for the market and also lease or sell to other food packers who engage in quick freezing of meats, fruits and vegetables. Method is called the Hendron process, and patents have been assigned to Booth.

Shipments of Auto Parts Hold in May

May shipments of automotive parts, accessories and service equipment held unchanged from April and showed an improved comparison with 1930.

There was a decided decline between April and May, 1930, according to Motor & Equipment Association.

Youngstown Steel Operations Steady

Youngstown, O., June 29—Youngstown district operations this week will be at 40 per cent of capacity, unchanged from the current rate.

Republic Steel Corp. will be at 45 per cent capacity, an increase of 5 per cent over the current rate.

Government Order to General Electric

The General Electric merchandise department has been successful in securing the fan motor business of the United States Government for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1931. This makes the eighth consecutive year the General Electric Co. has been awarded this business.

Lawrence Cheerful on Mill Outlook

City of Lawrence is reported optimistic over textile outlook there in view of recent increase in production, leading to actual shortage of skilled help. Increased payrolls and steadily increasing orders characterize mill operations there.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

SPECULATIVE STOCK

C. T., Boston—I have had fine advice from you and now want your opinion on a purchase of Standard Oil of Indiana.

Ans.—Standard Oil of Indiana, yielding about 9 per cent, is speculative. Conditions facing the oil industry as a whole are not encouraging. Earnings of $2.73 a share in 1930 influenced directors to put the stock on the current $2 annual basis March 16, 1931. Following 100 per cent stock dividend late in 1922, the rate had been $2.50 with extras. Resumption of dividends by a subsidiary will bring $1,233,113 into the company's treasury June 30.

NOT COVERED

B. B., Brookline—Do you think the dividend on United States Steel is secure? I have some of the stock at 100.

Ans.—March quarter earnings applicable to United States Steel common fell far short of dividend needs, being only 5 cents a share. How long the current $7 rate can be maintained, if not earned, is a matter of conjecture. In 1930 net income was equivalent to $9.14 a share, against $21.90 in 1929. Any attempt to guess future prices would not be worth while.

BIG DECLINE

S. O., Malden—Shall I hold or sell Pullman bought at higher levels? I can afford to keep it if you think it will advance.

Ans.—No one knows future market prices. Responsibility for the decision must rest with you. Pullman, Inc., can point to a good record, but earnings in the March quarter were only 15 cents a share, against $1.17 for similar period in 1930. Net for that year was $5.23 a share. The current $4 rate could not be considered secure.

SOMEWHAT LESS

P. L., Quincy—What are the latest earnings for Commercial Solvents? I have 70 shares at 18.

Ans.—In the March quarter, Commercial Solvents reported net income equal to 21 cents a share, or less than dividend requirements of 25 cents for that period. In 1930 net income was $1.07 a share, against $1.45 in 1929. Dividends have been paid from 1927; current $1 rate since ten-for-one split, October, 1929. The stock is a speculation. No one knows where it will sell.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE? Listeners Eager for Title Bout

Decision to Broadcast Fight Expected at Last Minute

Shh—shh, secret. Although no one actually knows, there are reasons for feeling reasonably certain that audible thuds, indicating fist-filled leather crashing against chins and abdomens, will be transmitted by radio this coming Friday evening. Cleveland, vigorous lakeside settlement of the mid-West, becomes a scene of battle.

Herr "Moxie" Schmeling, ofttimes referred to as the world's sham champion, is affording the opportunity of a lifetime to a young fellow from the South. No doubt "Pa" Stribling's big boy Willie, has heard the knock on his door. In fact, the elder Georgian insists that his dutiful offspring will also do some knocking that may be echoed clearly on distant shores bordering the Rhine.

Up to this writing, any notice concerning a radio broadcast must be strictly unofficial. Yes, we have no guarantees that the title fuss is slated for American armchairs. But remember, hunches will be hunches and little birds continue to light on window sills outside of newspaper offices. Consequently, predictions are made and there's two born every minute.

Come On Out, the Weather's Fine!

This important pugilistic ruckus is regarded as certain to be heard through the loud speakers of the land. What's more, Graham McNamee will more than likely be there in one corner or another to tell an ear-cupping world about the stars in Ohio's heaven. Incidentally, he may comment on how physically fit both gladiators look to him that evening, following through with a description of the fight itself during his spare time.

* * *

Just as soon as NBC or CBS make up their considerably occupied minds to issue an official bulletin, further revelations as to hook-up, time and other such details will be set forth on this page. Meanwhile radio and fight fans need have little or no hesitancy about planning an evening at home listening to Cleveland's dandy station (WTAM) airing the contest. Here's hoping for a scrap worth listening to.

* * *

While on the subject of Cleveland, another important milestone has been passed in that city, one which will benefit every other municipality possessing courage to follow suit. Judge Samuel Silbert, sitting in Common Pleas Court there last week, made a ruling that domestic radio disputes do not constitute grounds for divorce among Clevelanders.

* * *

Husbands out that way, who want to hear the baseball scores at the same time wifey wants to be thrilled by Morton Downey, will have to fight it out along those lines if it takes all summer.

An Old Friend Returns

Norman Brokenshire is far from through. Basking in the sunny South not long ago, he stated that when he was ready to go back on the chain "it would be easy." Sure enough, he slipped back with CBS as gracefully as you please, handling the last Wednesday night feature "Week-End," scheduled to continue until fall from WABC.

* * *

Floyd Gibbons is joining the ranks of illusion busters. He plans to broacast on July 4 from Independence Hall at Philadelphia. Among other historical facts, he plans to remind listeners that our Declaration of Independence was not signed on the Fourth. If rubbing that in continues, employers will soon get an idea we shouldn't have the day off.

* * *

Those who heard Phil Cook Friday evening (WBZ at 7:30) will recall that he has a very important announcement to make tonight. Maybe he's changing his time to another hour, or perhaps it's—perhaps it's, no hardly that. Just let's listen and find out.

Personalities

Although one would never suspect it of him, HEYWOOD BROUN has become a special introducer on the (of all the places) Home Makers' p'gram. He is heard this a. m. and a week from today . . . GRACES HAYES got her stage start in amateur nights with nary a "hook" . . . CHARLES FRANCIS COE told NBC list'rs in a recent b'dcast that he wouldn't lift a finger to hurt any gangster — Nor would 50 million other people . . . MARJORIE POSSELT, WEEI artist, returns from South America to say radio there is in the stage it was here seven years ago. Lucky S. America . . . NORMAN BROKENSHIRE comes out of hiding to serve as master of ceremonies on a WABC feature Wednesday . . . With the desire in mind to keep warm, JOHN WADDLE of Ted and Gang, will take his summer vacation in Mexico . . . SKIPPY has been mentioned as subject for a daily radio skit . . . With the Boy Scout motto tucked away in the back of his head, JACQUES RENARD is making out his Xmas cards now . . . Discouraging is OLGA ALBANI'S bon mot that the rumba preceded the shimmy in Latin America . . . Morton Downey will do more whistling and less singing starting with his July 6 p'gram . . . GEORGE HICKS, NBC announcer, has been given two months' leave to visit the folks in Oregon. M. G. M.

On the Air

Two new programs and a like number of special featueres head the parade to the microphone. Geraldine Farrar, prima donna, inaugurates a series over WBZ at 10:30 tonight by singing two operactic and two concert selections. Nat Shilkret leads the orch . . . The other neophyte, "Summer Daze," o'er WNAC at 9:45, offers talks by life guards, and Hawaiian music. Tonight's speaker is Chief McMonicle of the Coney Island corps . . . WEEI lists the two specials the first coming tonight at 11:15. A Pan-American concert, featuring Margarita Cueto, soprano, Mario Rejas, tenor and the U. S. Navy band, will be heard . . . Tomorrow at 5 the National Education Association offers a program of talks by educators, originating in Los Angeles.

Ted Lewis shunned the mike for many yrs. but now he can't stay away. His NBC series expired but over WNAC at 11:30 this eve. he starts a sustaining series . . . Martha Attwood and Everett Marshall, opera stars, are heard o'er WEEI at 9:30 tonight . . . Sammy Fuller and Steve Halaiko fight at Braves Field tonight and the affair will be described by Gerry Harrison on WAAB at 10 . . . The Three Bakers conclude their series o'er WNAC at 9 this eve . . . The Federal Radio Commission adjourned Saturday until September. During the summer the commissioners will make investigations of radio conditions in their various districts, sound out sentiment of b'dcasters, listeners, sponsors and manufacturers. In the fall there should be much blasting . . . After a six weeks tour of Europe the Revellers return to the states this week and return to the air a week from tonight . . . H. G. Wells will be heard on the CBS, July 13. He, like hordes of other radio speakers, will talk on Russia . . . The New Yorker concert orch. starts a NBC series Thursday, and just to be different the group features music of a delsimer, which only 16 musicians in this country can play . . . Floyd Gibbons joins the throng of "Russia-speakers." On July 15 he will combine with Frank Simonds, war correspondent, to discuss "Russian of Yesterday and Russia of Today." Floyd does another "special" July 4 when he hops to Philadelphia to b'dcast the "inside story" of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. M. G. M.

Decision in $40,000 Warren Suit Upheld

The full bench of the Supreme Court today upheld a decision of the late Judge ohn D. McLaughlin of the superior court, dismissing a bill in equity brought by Winslow Warren and others, trustees under the will of Andrew Carney, against David Stoneman, to recover $40,000 in connection with the conveying of property in Lowell ct., Boston.

The action was a result of the project to build a $10,000,000 movie theater on the site of Hotel Touraine, a project which was abandoned. Stoneman acted for the Boylston & Tremont Corp.

He will leave Seattle next month, accompanied by Mrs. Hurley.

DEFICIT OF 900 MILLIONS FACES U. S.

Washington, June 29 (INS)—Uncle Sam will take a net loss of close to $900,000,000 for the year ending June 30 because of the depression.

Treasury figures today indicated total receipts of about $3,307,000,000, $850,000,000 less than last year.

Governmental costs will approximate $4,177,000,000, an increase of $183,000,000 over 1930. Expenditures a few months ago were estimated by President Hoover at $4,435,000,000, which would have put the deficit above a billion dollars.

From the three principal sources of revenue the government will lose about $826,800,000. Customs receipts, which will run approximately $373,062,000 will be $214,000,000 below the figure for 1930, showing the greatest proportionate loss of any government income.

70 BOYS GIVEN WEEK'S OUTING

A group of more than 70 poor, undernourished children from various parishes in the Boston archdiocese, were today taken to Vacation House at Sunset Point, Nantasket, for a week's holiday.

The boys left Rowe's Wharf at 10:15 in charge of Miss Catherine Harrington and Miss Agnes Hassenfuss, attaches of the Catholic Charitable Bureau. They furnished the first contingent of groups of boys and girls in need of fresh air and sunshine who are taken care of in this way every summer by the bureau.

Youth Dying After Fall in Boiling Vat

Rochester, N. H., June 29 (AP)—A. L. Boisvert, 24, was dying at the Frieble Memorial Hospital today after having fallen into a vat of boiling dye at the Gonic Mills. He was feeding dyestuffs into the vat with a pail when he fell in head first.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

"Uneconomical and inconsistent with sound application of public interest," was the report made by the United States Radio Commission on the application of the Boston Pilots' Association for authority to establish harbor radio telephone land stations at Boston, in which they recommend that the request be denied. The commission says in the report that the service of such a station as proposed and planned would be private in nature, and that the frequencies available for assignment to harbor radio telephone service were so few that it would not be practical.

OUTING PLANNED

A large crowd is expected to attend the annual outing of the Foreign Commerce Club of Boston, which will be held this year at Ferncroft Inn, Middleton, tomorrow. The crowd will gather at 5 o'clock at the inn to enjoy sports, dinner and a dance.

JURY DISAGREES THEN PINS TWO

Two defendants on whom a jury in Suffolk court had disagreed, saw themselves convicted today after the jury was ordered to deliberate more on their cases.

The move may establish a precedent in sealed verdicts. A motion was immediately filed by counsel for the two men asking a ruling of Supreme Court.

The two were Edward C. Phair and John S. Weeden of Lynn, on trial for conspiracy in the manufacture and sale of "bootleg" radio tubes.

Three others were found guilty, one by directed verdict, another by his own plea and teh third by a jury. They were Jack Waldstein of Boston, Samuel Beckwith of Brookline and Louis Rich of Wakefield.

Julius Goldstone and Oscar Magerer were found not guilty, the latter by directed verdict.

$126 HOLDUP IN CHAIN STORE

A gunman entered a chain store in Myrtle ave., Cambridge, early today, robbed the manager, Thomas McCarthy, of a wallet containing $126 and made his escape without being seen by his victim.

McCarthy was facing a wall in a rear room of the store when he heard the door open. He called out, believing it was the order boy, and a moment later felt a gun at his back.

Still facing the wall, the manager felt his wallet being removed. The gunman backed out of the room after ordering McCarthy not to move.

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

Poultry raisers can learn something from Mayor Curley who has been known to accumulate 45 dozen eggs in one day from just a few birdies. Moreover, there is in the Curley stable only a mythical cow he wanted to pasture on the Federal building site and still he got 60 pounds of butter, in one day. Called upon to explain this remarkable production, Mayor Curley said he played golf with Fred L. Morgan, head of a big creamery company, and the Curley "birdies" won the butter and eggs on side bets.

BIG FIGURES

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman was busily engaged at home one evening recently in figuring out the valuations of taxable property in Boston while 10-year-old daughter Sally listened.

"One billion," said Mr. Silverman out loud. "One billion, two hundred thousand," he continued.

"Gee, dad, that sounds like Amos 'n' Andy," chirped Sally.

MISS O'NEIL HONORED

Anna C. O'Neil, chief investigator of the Boston board of assessors, in connection with abatement of taxes to those unable to pay, was given a deserved compliment recently in a national publication on taxation for her efficiency in weeding out persons who try to mulct the city. She was formerly attached to the Boston Finance Commission and social welfare organizations.

CAPLAN SEEKS OFFICE

Charles Caplan is a candidate for City Council from Ward 14, Dorchester. He seeks the seat now occupied by Israel Ruby. As a result of one of the good-will plans executed by Mr. Caplan, the schoolboys of his ward now attend the Red Sox baseball games free.

CUMMINGS IN CHARGE

William Cummings, Grand Knight of Fitton Council, K. of C., has been appointed chairman of the Fourth of July celebrations in East Boston. Bill is employed in the sewer division of the city public works department.

TO LOSE VACATION

Insurance Commr. Merton L. Brown does not expect to have the opportunity of taking a vacation this summer. With new compulsory insurance rates to be determined by September the commissioner finds that the job needs constant attention from now on.

PEPS UP STATEMENTS

Public Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow gets a lot of fun out of his work. One of the youngest of department heads Dr. Bigelow is a natural humorist. His statements and reports are always free from the "cut and dried" style of most government officials.

THE REASON WHY

Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edward C. R. Bagley, commenting on the recent criticism by a Suffolk grand jury of the death house at State Prison, says that the electric chair is purposely constructed so as to be rickety. There has got to be a lot of give, he explained, when the current is turned on. A rigid chair, he said, wouldn't do at all.

OPEN SESAME

"What is your name?" asked "Tom Ray, barring the progress of a young man about to enter the inner recesses of the executive suite. "George Lourie" was the answer. And then it was explained to the Governor's messenger that Lourie is an assistant attorney general.

NEW ROOSEVELT GROUP

Another political committee formed for the purpose of advancing the presidential candidacy of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York is expected to file notification papers this week with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook. The tentative lists of officers are Whitfield Tuck, president; James E. Heslin, vice-president; Mrs. John Keegan, treasurer; William H. McMasters, executive secretary. Mayor James M. Curley is listed as honorary president.

Hoover Back After Weekend on Rapidan

Washington, June 29 (AP)—President Hoover arrived at his office shortly after 9 o'clock this morning much rested by two nights and a day at his Rapidan camp in the Virginia mountains.

Chairman Wickersham of the law enforcement commission rode back with the chief executive from the Rapidan. Upon arriving in Washington he went directly to his office.

Mosquitoes---Why Not Exterminate Them?

It Could Be Done

BABY MOSQUITO OR LARVA

ITS "SIPHON" GREATLY MAGNIFIED

Mosquitoes have done more harm to human beings in this world than all the great wars. And they are doing harm today that amounts to enough, in actual cash, to pay off the cost of the big war.

Millions upon millions of men have been made feeble, practically useless, by malaria. WITHOUT MOSQUITOES THERE WOULD BE NO MALARIA.

Millions in past times have been killed by the yellow fever, and many in tropical countries are still killed by that deadly disease.

Without mosquitoes there would be no yellow fever.

It is suggested by serious historians that the fall of the great Roman Empire was caused, not by any invasion of "barbarians" from the North, but by malaria implanted in the blood of the Romans by mosquitoes permitted to breed in their millions. Rome was conquered first by the MOSQUITOES, and then it was easy for "barbarians" to do the rest.

The upper picture shows the larva in the water head downward. Just at the surface of the water, what looks like a foot, or tail, is in reality a "siphon" through which the creature breathes. If that breathing were interrupted, which could easily be arranged, it could never emerge from the water, never be born to poison and annoy human beings.

On the right in the upper picture you see the mosquito larva's breathing apparatus, greatly magnified. And you see how easily a few drops of oil would choke that breathing and end the mosquito.

The lower pictures shows the young mosquito, at the end of its life period in the water, emerging into the upper air prepared "for business."

Mosquitoes' eggs are laid in swamps, all stagnant waters, ditches, ponds, etc.

Here and there sporadic efforts are made to get rid of them. Some municipality starts a "war against mosquitoes," compelling owners of stagnant waters to drain ponds, or swamps, or spreading oil over the breeding waters. The thinnest film of oil, which quickly spreads for miles on the water's level surface, is enough to choke the young mosquitoes' "siphon," bringing quick death.

But cities, states and private individuals work separately, without plan, and the mosquitoes, wiped out in one place, come back.

What is needed is a united war against mosquitoes, all the States, and the National Government co-operating, and similarly there is needed a united war against RATS and MICE, that destroy hundreds of millions in property every year.

Spending a small part of what they destroy would wipe them out.

It would be a war calling for patience, especially as regards the mosquitoes. They breed wherever there is stagnant water, in a neglected tin can with rainwater in it, in the hollows of trees into which water has fallen.

But the United States Government was able to stamp out yellow fever by getting rid of mosquitoes, first in Cuba, then in the Panama Canal Zone. What could be done in those tropical regions in swamps with intense heat, could be done everywhere.

If the great breeding power of the mosquitoes is stamped out, in the BIGGER bodies of water, the remnant of mosquitoes could probably be left to the bat, swallow and the other mosquito enemies.

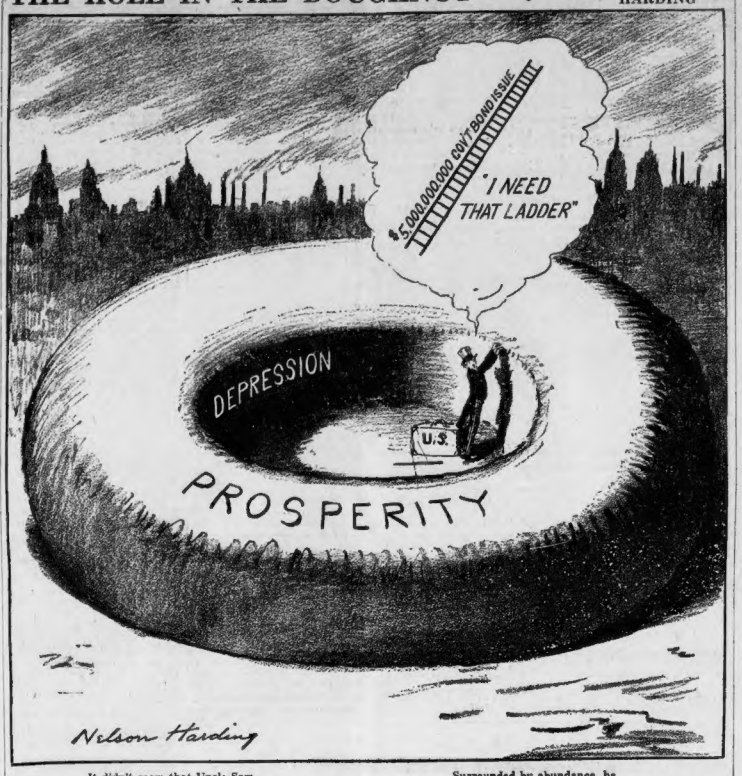

It is known and has often been proved that when any species of animal life is greatly reduced in numbers, it quickly dies out.

For more than a million years men have used their energies fighting and killing EACH OTHER. And they are still at it, arguing about armaments, one nation lying to another, and imposing on another.

But eventually civilization will stop wars and man killing. Then the REAL WAR will begin, a war against disease, germs, all insect pests. The beginning of that war will be the beginning of civilization.

THE HOLE IN THE DOUGHNUT -:-

By NELSON HARDING

It didn't seem that Uncle Sam
Could get in such an awkward place
As that in which he finds himself.
But, such, however, is the case.

Surrounded by abundance, he
Is faced by plenty all about.
But there is something that he lacks—
A ladder that will help him out.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Family Rows

A HUNDRED peeves in every mail.

And 99 out of 100 based on some family Row.

Somebody can't get along with his or her relations.

Elsie Robinson

THEN WHY TRY?

Yes, I know there's a beautiful theory that "birds in one little nest should agree"—but the human race has been trying for about 50,000,000 years to make that theory work and has never succeeded yet. So why not learn sense?

The plain truth is that maybe we'll like our relations, but the chances are just as strong that we won't. And it's neither unnatural nor ignoble if we don't. The mere fact that several people share the same name, blood and roof is no guarantee that they have a single, vital interest in common—or can become even congenial, much less friendly.

And this applies to the most intimate relationships. Your sister or brother, your mother or father, your own child, may all be as alien to you as African pigmies. That's nothing against them, nor against you. You all may be excellent people, in your way—yet your natures may be poles apart. In that case, the effort to establish close and affectionate relationship is utterly futile and bound to result in bitterness.

I have never seen statistics on Family Rows, but I'll wager they waste more time, energy and valuable human emotion than all the wars, pestilences, drouths, earthquakes, floods, fires and economic slumps combined. If there is an unmitigated Public Enemy it's the Family Row—yet we insist that it's inevitable and even excusable, in the name of love. But Family Rows have nothing to do with love, and it's as vicious to soil our lives "fightin' with the folks" as it is to indulge in any other degrading dissipation.

If you don't like your relations . . . or they don't like you . . . don't waste any more time sniffling or sentimentalizing over the situation. Don't think that some day you and Clara will get along because there's a blood tie between you. Blood tie be hanged! If you don't like each other, you never will—and there's no good reason why you should. Then face the fact and act upon it.

Stop squabbling with Darling Clara. Stop letting her squabble with you. Stop hairin' up all your friends and kin with tearful accounts of your brawls and demands that they Take Sides. IF YOU CAN'T GET ALONG WITH CLARA, CUT HER OUT! Stop talking to her. Stop talking ABOUT her—and thinking ABOUT her. For, remember, the quarrel you carry INSIDE you is just as demoralizing as the brawl you carry on outside you. Secret hate is as devastating as open conflict.

So stop trying to love Clara. But also stop hating her. Wish her well and go your way—clear your program of her entirely.

But supposing she continues to act mean? Well, suppose she does. Chances are she will. But that's Clara's bad luck—it needn't be YOURS. The other fellow's malice can never do you much damage unless you let it get your goat. Stop fussing about Clara and in time she'll stop fussing AT you.

"But it's terrible to act that way with your relations," you cry.

No, it isn't, stranger. It's smart. And it's civilized. And you deserve all you get if you don't act that way!

Just Folks

Iris

Iris, would that you could grow
Just a little stronger,
And could brave the winds that blow
Just a little longer.

Lovely are the blooms you bear,
Delicately tinted,
Like a bit of gossamer
For a fairy printed.

But for just a week in spring
Were your charms intended,
Then your radiant blossoming
Cruelly is ended.

Thus it is that mortals weep.
Joys they've learned to cherish
And the charms they long to keep Soonest seem to perish.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys:

NEW YORK, June 29—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and breakfasting with Mike and Alice Hogg and fell to wondering the whereabouts of Marie Doro and Viola Allen, the play actresses. Then away to a cheese monger and came upon Betsy Drake and Sadie Murray along the way and exchanged a tittle-tattle of brouhaha.

In the afternoon leaving the neat of the city and driving on the Saw Mill River road and sat under an old oak with my typing machine. And my wife reading her book cried it up as mighty idyllic.

Yet what with so many flying insects and the dogs abarking I got nothing done.

To dinner at the Sherry Netherland with Archie and Eleanor Andrews and Dean and Mildred Cornwell there and later to one of Archie's Trans-Lux movies. And carrying the Cornwells home, Dean gave the address as 1111 Park ave., but with my flair for numbers delivered them to 111 Fifth ave. . . .

Hollywood is in artistic throes of a film on the life of Sir Walter Raleigh and an anonymous correspondent on Ambassador stationery inquires anxiously if, at that auspicious moment when the cloak is spread for Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter will chirp: "Step on it, kid!"

Among exciting moments last week was a call on a trained-seal and its master. The pair comprise a vaudeville act and are preparing to tour the continent. The trainer was born in Arkansas and at an early age ran away with a circus. The seal during its stage lay-off is kept in a warehouse in West 47th st. where its tank is filled with fresh water daily. I learned a seal is not difficult to train—it usually requires about six months. The mammal is highly imitative and especially enjoys balancing tricks. My Boston, with a crazy bravado, rushed at the seal, but stopped short, utterly puzzled by the lightning zig-zagging of its head. Seals, incidentally, are ferocious when attacked.

The trainer said that on ocean voyages he frequently walked his seal around the deck just as a lark. Ever since I have been thinking a captive seal that near the ocean and freedom must face an agonizing problem in love vs. duty.

Verne Porter, the well known old whaler, who is my companion on curious expeditions, was rather mute in presence of the seal, nodding as it went through its stunts. But when it had finished, shuffled off to its tank and dived in with a splash, he cried: "Thar she blows—and sparm at that!" And went back to sleep.

I have been trying to "catch" another free animal act which several have written takes place in Gramercy Park every late evening or so. A pomeranian and a petite squirrel are taken to the park for a romp and frolic around like two puppies.

Then there is the fellow in Morningside Heights—the prettiest named section in town, by the way—who writes me he has a goldfish that comes to the surface at intervals and cheeps in a thin tenor. A stray fish is all that is needed to give me the final push into the padded cell.

Relief for Needy at Home

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

The business depression at this stage is aggravated and prolonged by the distinctly subnormal character of the construction industry.

Already consumer replacement purchases have raised retail sales above the low level of stagnation which prevails in the market place for permanent capital goods.

Such recent improvement as has been shown has been mainly in goods moving directly into consumption.

Urban department stores and specialty shops have facilitated these gains through energy in selling and through a determined disposition to break the deadlock by passing along to ultimate users the benefits of lower commodity prices.

A wit has remarked that a depression lasts only as long as it takes the average man to wear out two pairs of pants.

The pickup in retail sales has represented replenishment of consumer inventories of worn-out shoes and ships and sealing wax.

But in spite of this spurt, unemployment continues acute and business in the large remains distinctly subnormal.

To break the vicious circle of depression, it is necessary to stimulate permanent construction.

Recognizing this underlying economic truth, William Randolph Hearst has proposed that the Federal Government mobilize its superb credit, and raise $5,000,000,000 for a prosperity loan.

Waiting endlessly on private initiative only tends to postpone recovery, and to wear down the resistance of millions of unemployed.

Numerous technical financial factors favor Governmental leadership.

In the first place, the timidity of investors has tended to restrict the large scale demand for bonds to obligations of the highest grade. Gilt edged issues have soared, while second and third grade bonds, such as private corporations issue, have receded.

Secondly, unlike private industry, which is conducted for gain, it is not necessary for the Government to foresee prospects for an immediate profit in its large scale construction operations. The Government can afford to discount the future and to accept its ultimate dividends in the form of heightened popular welfare through the years.

A huge Governmental program of public works, including the building of waterways and power sites, such as President Hoover outlined in his acceptance speech at Palo Alto, would immediately redeem large numbers of unemployed from idleness.

The program of Governmental spending would inject purchasing power into the business machine, and would set in motion far-reaching processes of recovery.

It would tone up the demand for raw materials, which have been going a-begging in world markets.

Turning productive energy to permanent construction projects would release new purchasing power without an offsetting increase in the supply of consumable goods.

Thus, producers and distributors would be able to look forward to prices which would enable them to operate at a legitimate profit.

The essence of the Governmental program is in proper timing.

Now, after the event of deflation, it seems eminently safe to act boldly.

Such a policy is in line with the doctrine of modern scientific economists, and was espoused by the President's Conference on Unemployment, set up by President Harding a decade ago.

If public expenditures are to be used as a stabilizer, they must not only be augmented greatly in times of subnormal business, but by the same token they must be enormously restricted when private trade is booming.

Irrespective of international gestures, the opportunity of American statesmanship is to release 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 unemployed American workers from another Winter of distress.

President Hoover should immediately summon Congress for a special session to pass the enabling legislation for this soundly conceived economic program for restoring normal business.

Any delay might mean a third Winter of unemployment, with savings of the afflicted already exhausted, and with the cumulative tolls in human agony greater than before.

Employes to Aid Hospital

The employes of the Central New England Sanatorium at Rutland held an impromptu meeting of their own calling, and they decided unanimously and voluntarily to contribute a portion of their wages to that institution.

What a magnificent tribute!

No person knows a home better than the mother, and none know better the aims, purposes and accomplishments of an institution, whether it be a factory or a hospital, than the men and women who work regularly in it.

The Central New England Sanatorium is a hospital for the care and rejuvenation of tubercular patients. It devotes itself extensively to the reclamation of arrested cases. It teaches the ill not only the care of themselves but professions and trades in which they may engage when a fair measure of good health and strength is restored to them.

Its resources are taxed. Dr. Crane, the medical director, has given of his resources to their capacity. This institution is engaged in the beneficent work of saving human life, and it is commended to the generosity of the kindly-disposed people of Massachusetts and New England for the good it has done and the results it can achieve in the future.
